$7,000,000 DEFENSES FOR PANAMA CANAL

Secretary Dickinson and Major Gen. Bell Work Out Complete Scheme.

CHIEF FORTS AT PACIFIC END

13-Inch and 16-Inch Guns to be Mounted—Secretary a Convert to Lock-Type Ditch.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Fortifications to cost approximately $7,000,000 are to be built to defend the Panama Canal. In the twenty days Secretary of War Dickinson spent in looking over the ground he and Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Chief of Staff, went into the matter carefully. The significant feature of their tentative decision is that the most powerful and elaborate batteries are to be planted so as to repel attacks from the Pacific Ocean.

There are to be three batteries on the Pacific side. Lying off the mouth of the Canal are fifteen islands, and the three selected for the fortifications are between ten and fifteen miles off shore. They are Flamenco, Culebra, and Naoas Islands. On the coast line at each side of the Canal mouth there will be batteries, also, situated at Ancon and San Juan. The estimated cost of these fortifications without equipment is $3,500,000.

Six miles up the Canal from the Pacific Ocean there is to be a secondary battery. This will command the principal lock at Pedro Miguel, and the estimated cost will be $500,000. At Culebra, about the middle of the big ditch, a military post will be constructed at a cost of $250,000.

Atlantic Forts on Hills.

On the Atlantic side the arrangement will be much more simple. A range of hills runs down to the sea, commanding the entrance to the Canal. Upon them, at El Boco Point, modern batteries will be constructed at a cost of $2,500,000.

It is planned to mount in these fortifications more than sixty of the highest power disappearing guns. None of these will be of less than 13-inch calibre, and they will run as high as 16-inch in the main batteries. The secondary batteries will be of lower calibre, but they will be more numerous.

Mr. Dickinson and Gen. Bell went over the entire ground studying the strategic importance of the various sites. The plans, which have been in secret preparation for some time, are tentative, of course, for Congress may refuse to appropriate the money necessary for them if the nations of the world show a disposition to recognize the absolute neutrality of the Canal.

Mr. Dickinson is the newest convert to the lock type of canal across the Isthmus. The Secretary set out on his trip believing that a sea level ditch was the only logical and sensible type. Shortly after he reached his desk to-day he announced frankly that he had been wrong, and that his twenty days' investigation of conditions had dissipated his earlier conviction. Mr. Dickinson furthermore characterized the progress of the work as "highly satisfactory."

President is Well Pleased.

Shortly after reaching the War Department to-day, the Secretary went to the White House and made a personal report to President Taft. The President seemed well pleased with the change in Mr. Dickinson's views, for it proved to his own satisfaction that the stay-at-home critics know very little of the actual conditions on the Isthmus when they condemn the lock canal and insist that the sea level ditch is the only feasible plan for joining the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

It developed to-day that the Panama Railroad will practically be abandoned when the canal is completed. Almost all its traffic consists of freight carried between Panama and Colon for transshipment, and when this traffic is taken through the canal in ships the road may be transformed into an electric line for the carriage of passengers and light freight.

Secretary Dickinson expects that the canal will be opened for traffic by Jan. 1, 1915. This was the date fixed by Col. Goethals on the occasion of his visit here last winter, and he told the Secretary that he saw no occasion for changing his mind.

PICKED UP BOY HE RAN DOWN.

Then Chauffeur Called a Policeman to Go to the Hospital with Them.

When Albert Rogers, chauffeur for Josiah J. Allen of Southampton, L. I., ran over a boy in Fiftieth Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, yesterday, he took the injured boy to the hospital, first calling a policeman to accompany him.

Tommy Lavin of 356 West Forty-ninth Street was playing with some other boys in Fiftieth Street when he ran in front of Rogers's car. The chauffeur stopped, picked the injured boy up, and started at top speed for Roosevelt Hospital. At Seventh Avenue he stopped and asked Policeman Wood to go along. At the hospital it was found that the boy's thigh was fractured. The lad being half dazed gave his name as Leary and said he lived at 584 West Forty-ninth Street. No one named Leary was found at that address, but a Mrs. Collary was found there, who said the description of the lad answered that of her own son. So they took the anxious mother to the hospital. It was not her son who lay on the cot, and the woman went away relieved. In the meantime Tommy had recovered enough to give his right name and address.

Rogers and the policeman made another trip, and this time they took the right mother to the hospital. She fainted when told of the accident and said that last month she lost two children—one from diphtheria and the other from heart disease. Young Lavin will be out again in a few weeks. After it was all over the chauffeur was arrested.

MOTOR ABLAZE IN BROADWAY.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanan Have a Narrow Escape from the Tonneau.

Broadway, crowded at the theatre hour last night, saw a motor car suddenly burst into flames and a man and a woman escape from it just in time.

The car belonged to J. H. Hanan, the shoe manufacturer, who, with his wife, was in it. The accident occurred at Broadway and Forty-first Street. The traffic officer at the corner had halted Mr. Hanan's chauffeur, J. W. Matteson. The chauffeur stopped so suddenly that the car immediately behind him, which was running at good speed, jammed into Mr. Hanan's car before it could stop, making a large hole in the gasoline tank.

Matteson knew by the shock that something was broken, but he had no idea that his car was on fire until he started to go ahead, when the flames leaped up the sides of the automobile.

Mrs. Hanan screamed, and both she and Mr. Hanan tried in vain to open the door. The chauffeur jumped from the box and swung the door open, and the two escaped, while the flames leaped around them.

A throng of several hundred quickly gathered, and Mr. Hanan pushed his way with difficulty through it, holding Mrs. Hanan in his arms, for she had very nearly fainted. They made their way down the street to the Metropolitan Opera House, where they were going to the Lambs Club Gambol. Mr. and Mrs. Hanan live at the Belmont, and they returned there later in the evening.

In the meantime some one had turned in a fire alarm, and soon the whistles of the engines coming in all directions brought still more of a crowd. Broadway soon became blocked. The Fire Department soon extinguished the blaze, and the car was taken back to the garage at 42 East Forty-first Street.

"The car which ran into us," said Matteson, the chauffeur, "was numbered 31,313. It must have been going rather rapidly to have destroyed the tank so completely."

Mr. Hanan's car cost, when new, $6,500. The body was almost completely destroyed.

TAFT PLAYS JOKE ON AID.

Picks Flowers from Wilson's Beds and Tells Watchman to Take Butt.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Taft despoiled one of Secretary Wilson's flower beds in the grounds of the Agricultural Department, and added to his misdemeanor by turning on Capt. Archie Butt, his military aid and personal assistant, in the descent on the blossoms. Then he astounded an elderly watchman and rescued the military man from a cell, whirling away to the White House in a gale of laughter.

All this happened Saturday, but it was not known until to-day, when Mr. Taft confessed to Secretary Wilson over the telephone. The President, Capt. Butt, and a friend of Mr. Taft, whose identity is not known, took a spin in the Mall Saturday afternoon. The chauffeur drove the official car along the river drive and was returning to the White House by way of the gardens when the President's eye fell on a handsome flower bed.

"By George, those are beautiful blossoms," he said, punching Capt. Butt in the ribs with his thumb. "Let's get out and pick a few."

The three men descended from the machine and promptly fell to work. It was warm work for a man inclined to be somewhat portly, and Mr. Taft withdrew to the shelter of a near-by tree just as an indignant watchman raced up.

"Hey you," he shouted to Capt. Butt. "What d'ye mean by that? Don't you know you're breaking the law? You're under arrest."

Before the astonished military man could find his tongue the President came from beneath the tree and joined in the tirade. Mr. Taft carefully kept his large handful of flowers concealed behind his broad back.

"Your action is reprehensible, Butt," he said severely. "I told you to leave those flowers alone. You should be severely punished. Take him where he belongs, my good man."

The watchman at this point recognized the President. He was no more surprised by Mr. Taft's presence than Capt. Butt was by his Commander-in-Chief's apparent desertion of him. But when the watchman began stammering an embarrassed apology Mr. Taft burst into laughter. He told the man that he had done perfectly right, and commended him for his watchfulness.

TAFT WITHDRAWS WOODRUFF.

Too Much Opposition to ex-Football Player for Hawaiian Judgeship.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—At the suggestion of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which it had been referred, President Taft has withdrawn the nomination of George Woodruff, the former University of Pennsylvania football player, to be United States Judge in Hawaii. It was made clear to the President that there was such opposition in the committee to the nomination that confirmation was impossible, and rather than force a fight the President recalled the nomination.

Woodruff stands high in the good graces of President Roosevelt, and his appointment to the Hawaiian Judgeship has been ascribed to that influence. That may account for some of the Judiciary Committee opposition. But the explanation emanating from committee sources is that the Senators were not satisfied with Woodruff's experience as a lawyer and did not think it qualified him for a responsible appointment to the Federal bench.

HAS HIS OWN SON ARRESTED.

The Ronfeldts, Father and Son, Quarreled Over Insurance Policies.

Charles J. Ronfeldt, who lives at 681 Macon Street, Brooklyn, and who, with his brother, William H. Ronfeldt, is in the engraving business at 96 Fulton Street, Manhattan, was arrested in the street near his office yesterday afternoon by Central Office Detective Geegan, on a warrant issued earlier in the day by Magistrate Breen, in the Tombs Court.

The warrant was obtained by the engraver's father, William Ronfeldt, a dealer in parquet floors at 1,276 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn. Charles Ronfeldt was charged with sending letters to his father in the last six months threatening his life. The engraver was admitted to $500 bail furnished by his father-in-law, Henry J. Lankenau, a real estate dealer, of 175 Kingston Avenue, Brooklyn.

At the homes of both the younger and elder Ronfeldt it was said last night that the trouble between father and son had been merely over the possession of two insurance policies on the life of the elder Ronfeldt. The son was paying the premiums, it was said, and he had demanded that the policies be turned over to him.

Mrs. Charles Ronfeldt denied last night that her husband had ever threatened his father.

GLUCOSE TRUST MAY RUN CANDY STORES

National Confectioners See a Big Fight Coming for Control of the Trade.

ARRANGING FOR FACTORIES

And Afterward, President Bedford Says, May Sell Their Product Through Its Own Establishments.

The Corn Products Refining Company, of which E. T. Bedford of the Standard Oil Company is President, and in which James A. Moffett, F. Q. Barstowe, and Charles M. Pratt are Directors, and William Rockefeller and the late H. H. Rogers were generally understood to be largely interested, is likely to go into the retail candy business. The company may even, though a subsidiary, open a chain of candy stores to dispose of its product.

As has been generally known, the Directors at their last meeting took the preliminary steps toward starting a project for utilizing the glucose manufactured in the company's plants by establishing candy factories. This step, it was said yesterday, is likely to be followed by the retailing of the product of the factories, through a company yet to be organized, in its own stores. The candy business has recently seen in a smaller way signs of approaching organization on the modern lines of combination, but this step will be far in advance of anything yet suggested.

One of the principal ingredients in the making of candy in these days is glucose, of which the company manufactures between seventy-five and eighty-five per cent. of all that is consumed in the United States. About thirty per cent. of the company's total output now goes into candy making through sales to the large manufacturers.

If the Corn Products Refining Company uses its glucose in its own candy factories and sells the product in its own stores, then the smaller and hitherto independent candy companies, such as Huyler's, Loftus's, the Mirror, and Repetti's, will have either to go into the bigger concern or compete with it, if they can.

Members of the National Confectioners' Association, who discussed the situation last night—and there were many who spoke freely on the subject—pointed out that the candy trade in the United States looked as though it were going to take a similar course to that already taken by this country's tobacco trade.

E. T. Bedford, President of the Corn Products Refining Company, was asked last night by a TIMES reporter about the rumors that his company would soon go first into the wholesale, and then into the retail candy business.

"The Corn Products Refining Company," said Mr. Bedford, "manufactures three-fourths of all the glucose made in this country. About 30 per cent. of this is now sold to confectioners for the making of candy. At our last directors' meeting, three weeks ago, the officers of the company were recommended to investigate the desirability of the company's manufacturing candy for itself instead of selling glucose to individual confectioners and candy makers."

"If the Corn Products Refining Company decides to manufacture candy for itself, will it continue to sell the glucose, of which it controls so large a proportion, to other manufacturers?" President Bedford was asked.

"Probably not," was his reply.

"In case the Corn Products Refining Company undertakes the manufacture of its own candy, how will it be marketed?" was asked.

"That depends," replied Mr. Bedford. "Perhaps a large company for retailing it may be formed."

Members of the National Confectioners' Association seemed somewhat disturbed when discussing Mr. Bedford's statement. The reason was explained by a member of the association.

"Glucose is essential in candy making," said this man. "But it cannot be manufactured profitably except in very large quantities and by an extremely large company. Individual confectioners and candy manufacturers cannot possibly make it themselves.

"The must either buy it from the Corn Products Refining Company, which manufactures almost 85 per cent. of all the glucose in the country, or from the other four or five smaller outside glucose manufacturing concerns which provide the other 15 per cent. Huylers, the Mirror, and Repetti's, for example, although they make their own candy, have to buy all the glucose they use either from the Corn Products Refining Company or from its smaller rivals.

"In my opinion a fierce struggle is about to take place for the control of the candy business. These Standard Oil men, seeking investment for a constantly accumulating capital, desire to use it to advantage. They see a new and profitable field for investment in the National candy field. It has been the history of such enterprises that the bigger capital usually wins."

The Corn Products Refining Company, a merger of half a dozen of the largest glucose manufacturing companies of the country and now capitalized at $80,000,000, was organized only a few years ago by a group of Standard Oil men, among whom Mr. Bedford took the initiative. Besides these there are now in its Directorate men like William J. Matheson, who were stockholders in the New York Glucose Company, the Corn Products Company, and the other glucose manufacturing companies of this country, which in March, 1906, were merged into the present $80,000,000 Corn Products Refining Company.

The Directors of the company some three months ago voted a new bond issue of $10,000,000, half of which has already been taken up by Speyer & Co., for "extension of the business." Recently President Bedford and Secretary Fisher of the company have been investigating the candy manufacturing field in the West. Secretary Fisher refused last night to discuss a report that the plans of his company had gone so far that it was ready to announce the prospective opening of a transcontinental chain of candy stores.

Presidents John S. Huyler and M. L. Morgenthau, respectively of Huyler's and the Mirror candy stores, stated emphatically last night that theirs were still independent concerns.

FIRE IN LONDON TUNNEL.

Cable Fused and Car on Fire—Passengers Got Out Safely.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24. — Considerable commotion was caused at 10 o'clock this evening by the fusing of a cable on a train of the London District Railway at Charing Cross, where the road is under ground. The fusing occurred in the station, and all the passengers alighted safely, but the smoke and fumes of the burning cable filled the place, and the efforts of the electrical staff proving unsuccessful in extinguishing the flames and one carriage taking fire, the fire brigade was sent for.

Eventually the flames were extinguished by the use of a plentiful supply of sand, and when the current had been cut off in the section involved the passengers caught in the other trains held up in the tunnels were escorted by the aid of flare lamps to the nearest platforms. Traffic was still suspended at Charing Cross at midnight.

Another fire scare occurred at the Hotel Victoria, in Northumberland Avenue, where many American visitors are now staying. A blaze was discovered in the neighboring premises of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, and it was thought the hotel was endangered, though the management pooh-poohed the idea.

The excitement was not calmed when the firemen appeared dragging hose through the hall to the upper floors from which they could play upon the neighboring building. Moreover, one big hose burst and several visitors were drenched.

The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge lost property in the form of Bibles and prayerbooks to the value of nearly $50,000.

THEATRE LOBBY HOLD-UP.

Three Men Beat a Man in Attempting to Get His Roll and Fail.

While purchasing tickets for himself and wife at Keeney's Third Avenue Theatre, Third Avenue and Thirty-first Street, last night, Charles Williams of 667 Third Avenue displayed a roll of bills containing $200. A few minutes later he was called to the lobby and assaulted by three men who tried to rob him of the money and beat him with a blackjack. One man was arrested after a small panic had been caused in the playhouse.

Williams, when he paid for two tickets to the show, peeled a five-dollar bill off a big roll, and stuffed it and the change from the tickets loosely into his trousers pocket.

Hardly had Williams taken a seat in the semi-darkened theatre when a man touched him on the shoulder and said:

"A friend wants to see you in the lobby."

Williams was not suspicious, but his wife, remembering the money, was apprehensive. They were in a back seat, and she watched him go to the door. As Williams opened the door leading to the lobby he was confronted by three men, one of them the man who had called him out.

"What do you mean by doing that?" asked one of the three.

"I haven't done anything," said Williams.

One of the trio struck Williams a stinging blow on the jaw.

Another reached forward and got his hand partly into Williams's pocket where the roll was. Williams closed his hand over the outside of the pocket.

Another of the men pushed him against the doorjam and another attempt was made to get the money. Williams fought back, and one of the three struck him on the ear with what was evidently a blackjack.

Mrs. Williams witnessed the attempted robbery and screamed. Her cries frightened the people in the show house and a break was made for the door. Policeman Bewick also heard the cries and ran in. He saw the attempted robbery and rapped for assistance. The three men broke away and fled, but in the excitement no one knew whether they had gone out or stayed in the theatre. They did not get Williams's money.

When other policemen arrived the doors of the theatre were closed and no one permitted out. The show was broken up for twenty minutes while the police went through the place with Williams looking for his assailants. In a rear seat of a box they found a man who Williams said was the one that called him out and afterward aided in the hold-up. The man was locked up. He said he was Thomas Cunningham, a bircklayer, of 302 East Twenty-sixth Street. He said he knew nothing of the hold-up.

ACCUSED OF MURDER AND SHOT

Irvin J. Carter Killed as He Awaits Trial for Slaying Thomas Bagby.

Special to The New York Times.

HUNTSVILLE, Mo., May 24.—Irvin J. Carter, who was awaiting trial for shooting Thomas Bagby a year ago, was found dead last night in his home, a few miles south of here, with a pistol and a shotgun wound. A revolver, with all the chambers loaded, lay beside his body.

Thomas Bagby, the son of a farmer of the neighborhood, was shot last June in the Carter yard at night. At first it was said that he was mistaken for a burglar, but this story was soon disproved. Then it was admitted that he had taken advantage of Beulah Carter and that her brother and Bagby had quarreled at church a week before the killing.

It was shown that Bagby went to the Carter home in response to a note from Beulah. This note was never found. Beulah went on the witness stand at the preliminary hearing and said that she and Bagby were engaged. She urged him to keep his promise to marry her, but he refused.

George Harris, an uncle of the girl, testified to a family conference, at which Bagby's death was decreed. He said that Beulah, her father, mother, and brother were present at the conference.

Irvin Carter was held for the Grand Jury without bail. His uncle was arrested later and was also charged with being a principal in the killing. Both of the accused men were released on bail after a few weeks.

FAMINE GRIPS TOWNS ON TIED-UP RAILROAD

Flour and Fresh Meat Run Short Along the Line of the Georgia Railway.

NEILL OFFERS MEDIATION

Labor Commissioner to Try to Settle Controversy Over Negro Firemen —Strike May Spread.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 24.—Charles P. Neill, United States Commissioner of Labor, is expected here to-morrow, and the hope of a speedy settlement of the strik of firemen on the Georgia Railroad centres on his arrival. Gov. Hoke Smith proposed to-day a commission of six Georgians, three to be selected by each party to the controversy, and Vice President Ball of the Locomotive Firemen accepted the suggestion. General Manager Scott of the Georgia Railroad, however, replied that he could not agree to the proposal until Commissioner Neill had taken some action. He made the same answer to an offer of mediation from the Augusta Chamber of Commerce.

Meanwhile the situation along the railway is growing serious and there is danger of actual famine in some of the towns. Not a wheel has turned on the Georgia Railroad since Saturday, and there is no immediate prospect of a resumption of service. Many places report that they are short of flour and that the fresh meat supply has given out.

Twenty-five business men of Crawfordville to-day wired the State Railroad Commission: "For God's sake do something, as we are threatened by famine." In many other towns the situation is just as serious, but the people who have created the situation by mobbing the negro firemen show no disposition to recede from their position.

The railway management, according to the strikers, recognizes that the people along the line are responsible for the tie-up and is willing that they should be punished by isolation.

One feature of the situation is that the strike has prevented the interment of several corpses in Atlanta. Relatives wished to bury them at their old homes along the Georgia road, but cannot procure transportation for them.

The immediate cause for the strike was the discharge of ten white firemen from the Georgia terminals and the filling of their places with negroes. The firemen now demand that negroes be eliminated as far as possible by the Georgia road. They will probably not insist upon the dismissal of those who were employed as firemen before the strike, but they will ask that white men receive the preference. They will ask, too, that whenever possible a negro will be replaced by a white man.

The strike is not confined to the Georgia Railway, but extends to the Georgia terminals, a distinct organization, which is owned jointly by the Georgia, West Point & Louisville, and Nashville Railroads. The threat was made to-day by E. A. Ball, Vice President of the firemen, that if other railroads receive freight shipments diverted from the Georgia Railway the strike of firemen will be extended to them.

He argues that the receipt of freight diverted from the Georgia Railway by other roads makes them the allies of the Georgia Railway and the opponents of the firemen, and that consequently they are liable to be drawn into the strike.

According to an official of the Georgie Railway, it is diverting its freight over the Southern, Seaboard, Louisville & Nashville, and Central Georfgia Railroads. Attorney General Hart, who made a trip over the Georgia Railway, at the request of Gov. Hoke Smith, to investigate conditions, was very rudely treated, as the people thought he was in sympathy with the company. At several points he was abused as a "nigger lover," and was kept busy explaining that he was simply investigating, and was not taking the part of the negroes.

The railroad authorities assert that they are informed that the crowds of citizens at Thompson, Camak, and other points are still in a bellicose attitude. A large number of strike breakers are here and at other points on the road. Preparations are under way by the Post Office officials to establish an automobile mail service between Union Point and Athens, Ga.

SHORTAGE OF BLUE POINTS.

Oyster Beds in Great South Bay and the Sound Destroyed by Storms.

Special to The New York Times.

BLUE POINT, L. I., May 24.—The recent heavy storms, which were the severest of the season, have destroyed millions of oyster spawn in Great South Bay and Long Island Sound, and the supply of blue points may materially be reduced.

The oysters were smothered in sand through the action of the water. It is said that all the oyster beds in the vicinity had been newly planted only recently.

NO BAR AT NEW THEATRE.

Governor Vetoes Bill to Permit It on Private School's Consent.

ALBANY, May 24.—The Alt bill, designed to permit the sale of liquor in the New Theatre in New York City, was vetoed to-day by Gov. Hughes. The bill amends the liquor tax by permitting traffic in liquors within 200 feet of a private school with the consent of the person or corporation using the building for that purpose.

In the memorandum accompanying the veto the Governor says:

"The amendment cannot be justified. It ignores the fact that the policy of the law is for the protection of the children and not for the advantage of proprietors or managers of schools. That policy is expressed in the provision for a free area about our schoolhouses. If proprietors of private schools may be permitted to allow this area to be encroached upon, it is difficult to see why the public authorities should not have the same privilege with regard to public schools.

"In our large cities the pressure upon our public school system is so great that a large number of children must inevitably be educated in private schools, and, under the conditions which actually exist, suitable safeguards should be provided in both cases."

COMET OR NORTHERN LIGHTS?

Unusual Astronomical Phenomenon Observed at Geneva, N. Y.

GENEVA, N. Y., May 24.—An unusual astronomical phenomenon, which had the appearance of a comet close to the earth, was observed early this morning at the Smith Observatory here by Dr. William R. Brooks, Professor of Astronomy at Hobart College. In reporting his observations he says:

"The object was visible in the eastern sky from 2 to 3 o'clock this morning. It had the appearance of a gigantic 'naked eye' comet, with a large head and a tail of enormous proportions. When first seen the head was in the great square of Pegasus and the tail stretched upward toward the North Star, at one time reaching the Chair of Cassiopeia. The motion was rapidly eastward.

"At 2:30 A. M. the head enveloped the star Algenib, and by 3 o'clock it had reached the horizon. Soon after the tail was lost in the rapidly advancing dawn."

Prof. Brooks, who in the past thirty-five years has discovered twenty-five comets, a greater number than any other living astronomer, thinks that the phenomenon may not have been a comet, but merely an unusual manifestation of the aurora borealis. No other auroral effect was visible, however. If the object was a comet it must, he says, have been very close to the earth.

PUTS BAN ON POWDER PUFFS.

Schoolmistress Also Forbids Beauty Spots on Young Cheeks.

Miss Rachel Bengamini, principal of the branch of the Washington Irving High School at West End Avenue and Eighty-second Street, gave notice on Friday that hereafter the girls who came to the school with powder and beauty spots on their faces should stand up before the class, while these supposed aids to good looks were removed with a towel.

This came as a blow to some of the pupils who had been acquiring the habit of bringing powder puffs to school with them. There were no powder marks or beauty spots in sight yesterday.

Miss Bengamini, in no wise softened, repeated her order, also adding a new rule. Hereafter the high school girls must go straight home and hold no conversation with the youths from the School of Commerce near by. The principal said she had heard, though it might not be true, that some of the girls were in the habit of leaving school early to keep engagements with students from the boys' school.

AMERICANS CROWD LONDON FOR DERBY

King's Horse Still Favorite, and Both King and Queen Will Be at Epsom.

MOST TAXICABS BESPOKE

Record Gathering Expected for Races and Sir Martin, American Bred, at 7 to 2 Is Tod Sloane's Tip.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—Both King Edward and Queen Alexandra will go to Epsom Wednesday to see the Derby in which the King's horse still maintains well the lead in the betting, 95 to 40 against being taken to-day, while American-bred Sir Martin is 7 to 2. The latter, by the way, is Tod Sloane's tip. He gave it this evening, among others to Richard Croker, who was dining in the Parisian café at the Savoy with George Kessler, whose guest he was at the latter's place up the Thames over Sunday. Mr. Croker would not say whether or not he was influenced by the former jockey's advice, but he will certainly have something on Sir Martin from patriotic motives.

Should the King's Minoru win, it will be interesting to see if his Majesty will follow a tradition as old as the Derby itself, which requires the owner of the Derby winner to lead the victorious horse into the inclosure when the jockey dismounts. As Prince of Wales Edward did this on the two occasions on which he won, and there is much speculation on this point.

With the continuance of the present fine weather and the popularity of the King's representative as an extra attraction Wednesday, the Derby promises to draw a record attendance. All the old-time methods of conveyance to the Downs, from four-in-hands to the coster's moke, will be in evidence, with the public taxicab as the newest feature. It is understood that a huge majority of these vehicles which ply the streets of London have been engaged for Derby Day—a large number of them by American visitors.

Of these latter, the last two or three days has seen a great influx. Among those who have arrived for Derby Day are Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Miss Vanderbilt, and Mrs. Stevens, who have taken apartments at the Ritz for the week and engaged a motor car for four days to take them to and from the race course; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames and daughter, who have come from Paris to the Ritz to remain until June 5, when they will sail for America; Mr. and Mrs. Richard McCreery, the latter formerly Lady Louisa Grey Edgerton, who will spend the season in London; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Francis, who will be joined by the latter's mother, Mrs. Bostwick, on June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Drexel Paul of Philadelphia also have arrived, coming from Paris in their automobile and reaching town to-day. They are to remain for a week at the Berkeley. Other arrivals are Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Ames, who have just returned to the Berkeley from a motor tour through England; Mr. and Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears of Boston, who are at the Hyde Park Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. Jonathan Thorne, who will remain at Claridge's for a week or two and afterward proceed to Paris; Mr. Moulton and Charles Schwartz of New York, who are at the Savoy and will give a picnic party on Derby Day, taking their guests to Epsom in several automobiles.

SIR MARTIN'S DERBY CHANCE.

Trainer's Report of Colt's Well-Being Arouses New Interest in Race.

Sir Martin's chance to win the Epsom Derby in England to-morrow has become a matter of National interest, and no horse race since the beginning of sure things has made such appeal to popular feeling in America as the Epsom classic, in which the solitary American colt has been established as the one real rival to the English favorite, King Edward's own horse Minoru.

Sir Martin and his chance to win the Derby was talked of everywhere yesterday, and the interest of race-going Americans in the big English event received a new stimulus when it became known at the Belmont Park race course that John E. Madden, who bred and developed the American Derby hope, had received a message by cable from Joseph Cannon, the English horseman who is training Sir Martin for the Derby. The message was a simple announcement of Sir Martin's well-being, and the hope and confidence of the stable that the American horse would acquit himself with honor at Epsom to-morrow.

Trainer Cannon's message was brief, and stated simply, "Horse well; will take some beating." It was amply satisfactory to Mr. Madden, who stated, however, that he had refrained from betting on the race, except for the single personal wager he made with Hermen B. Duryea last Summer at Saratoga, when he bet Mr. Duryea $5,000 that Sir Martin would beat the then unbeaten Bayardo, which even at that time was being talked of as a Derby winner. Mr. Madden stated also that he has the contingent interest in Sir Martin's chance for the $34,000 of the Derby stakes, which was registered with the English Jockey Club when the colt was sold to Louis Winans. His chief interest in the race is to have the American colt win the most famous race in the world.

Hope for the victory of the American horse is universal among Americans who have watched the developments of the Derby, and from what has been published recently in English turf and sporting periodicals, it would seem that there is something much more substantial than hope in Sir Martin's Derby chance. Reviewing the performances of the Derby horses, up to the latest trials that any of them had in public, and taking in the Newmarket meeting, The London Field reaches the conclusion that while Minoru is entitled to the position he occupies as favorite, nevertheless the race is very open, and five other horses seem to have chances. Of these, Sir Martin's chance is considered most fully.

Comparing Minoru and Sir Martin, it is conceded that Minoru has made extraordinary improvement since last year. After considering the five horses mentioned, Sir Martin, Louviers, Phaleron, Valeur, and Bayardo, the writer concludes that at the prices quoted in the betting, Sir Martin and Louviers are better worth supporting than Minoru. Of Sir Martin, the critic says finally: "Sir Martin is, of course, rather an unknown quantity so far as the best form is concerned, but he won in such convincing style and is such a great galloper that it would be most unwise to ignore his chances."

Sir Martin was shipped to England in December, following his sale by Mr. Madden to Mr. Winans for a price reputed to be $75,000, and landed suffering with a cough. His training after his landing proceeded satisfactorily, but he has run only one race in England, and then, conceding much weight to old horses of moderate calibre, he won at a mile at Newmarket. In America Sir Martin was quite the best two-year-old colt of last season, winning eight races, being second four times, and unplaced once. It was notable of Sir Martin's races that he always finished strong and gave every promise of staying, and he earned his most brilliant triumphs at the longer distances for two-year-old races, his best performance having been in the Flatbush Stakes, at seven furlongs.

B. R. T. CARS CRUSH THREE.

Boy Killed and a Girl and a Man Mortally Injured in Three Accidents.

A small boy was killed, a little girl injured so badly that she will die, and an employe of the company crushed between two cars so that he cannot recover, in three accidents on B. R. T. lines yesterday.

Harold Lawson, 11 years old, of 9,205 Fifth Avenue, was the boy who lost his life. He was playing in front of his home, which adjoins the Fort Hamilton branch of the Erasmus Hall High School, when school was dismissed and a crowd of girls trooped ont onto the sidewalk. Harold was a favorite with the elder school children, and two young girls, seeing him playing in his yard, called to him from across the street.

The boy ran out of the yard and started across the street toward them. He was struck by a Fifth Avenue trolley car headed for Fort Hamilton, and before the motorman could stop the car, both the boy's legs had been cut off.

When the children who had called him saw what had happened, there was a panic among them, some of them becoming hysterical. The boy's body was removed from beneath the car and Dr. Gould was called from the Norwegian Hospital. He hurried the boy there in an ambulance, but he died at 7 o'clock last night

The second accident happened in New Utrecht Avenue where the elevated trains of the West End line run on the surface. Five-year-old Amelia Corsa with her mother and baby brother were in the street near Fortieth Street, where they live at 934. Across New Utrecht Avenue was the wagon of an ice cream sandwich man. The mother gave the little girl 2 cents to purchase a sandwich. The child started to skip across the street, in her hurry for the treat, not observing an elevated train which was bowling along at high speed. She was struck and her right leg and arm amputated. She was unconscious when picked up, and the mother fainted. The girl was taken to the Norwegian Hospital, but it was said last night that she could not live through the night.

Residents of the section have frequently complained at the speed with which elevated trains are run through the unprotected street. At the point where the little girl was struck there is neither a flagman nor a gate. The West Brooklyn Board of Trade has held meetings in reference to the matter, and a committee was appointed recently to take it up with Mayor McClellan.

Henry Weaver of 9 Sumner Avenue was uncoupling a Culver Line train at Elmwood and Gravesend Avenue, where the last three cars are cut off from the Coney Island trains, when the train backed up upon him and crushed him between the cars. He was hurried to the Kings County Hospital, but it was said that he would die.

KILLED ON ELEVATED ROAD.

James H. Martin of Brooklyn Fell Between Cars in Rushing to Get On.

While a southbound Third Avenue elevated train was starting out of the 129th Street station yesterday morning, a middle-aged man, who was subsequently identified as James H. Martin of 35 Chauncey Street, Brooklyn, rushed toward it, and as he reached the edge of the platform he stumbled and fell between the fourth and fifth cars.

Fred Abrams of 165 East Ninety-seventh Street, who was on the rear platform of the fourth car, saw the man tumble and pulled the emergency cord, which brought the train to a stop with a jerk.

Mr. Martin was caught between the bumpers, which crushed three of his ribs and hurt him internally. Abrams and two other men, Anthony Gramm of 143 West 135th Street, and Henry Corbett of 26 West 138th Street, extricated the injured man and carried him into the station, while an ambulance was called from Harlem Hospital. When Dr. Cassini arrived the man was unconscious, and he died at noon at the hospital.

The accident created much excitement in the train and about the station, and several women left the train.

Later in the day Mrs. Martin called at the Harlem Hospital Morgue with a man companion. The woman was too unnerved to look at the body, but her companion did, and identified it as the woman's husband.

BEGIN A FIGHT ON FALLOWS.

Protest Raised Against His Large Share in Inheritance Tax Cases.

A vigorous protest, which in some quarters is believed to have originated with the local Republican machine, is being voiced against the designation by State Controller Charles H. Gaus of nonresident inheritance tax transfer cases to ex-Assemblyman Edward H. Fallows. Mr. Gaus also has appointed nine special attorneys in transfer tax cases of decedents resident in New York County. It is one of the fattest political plums.

In the protest which now is forthcoming it is pointed out that Mr. Fallows, who, while a member of the Assembly during the Roosevelt Gubernatorial régime, took the legislative initiative which led to the transfer of the collection of transfer taxes on inheritance money from the Surrogate's office to special transfer tax agents appointed by the State Controller with a special attorney to aid them in the task, has made a fortune out of his reform which ostensibly was made in the interest of economy. It is shown that Mr. Fallows in the eight years he has been special attorney to the transfer tax collectors, has realized $374,411, and that, based on his receipts during the three first months of this year, his income before it is ended will be about $150,000.

But what the present protest is most concerned with is the fact that Mr. Fallows is getting more than his share out of the nonresident cases. Out of 1,530 such designations made this year, he has received 1,129. John S. Jenkins, a McCarren man, who held the place during Controller Glynn's term, was assigned to 317, while 84 cases were distributed among other attorneys.

Mr. Fallows could not be reached at his home in Dobbs Ferry last night.

New Laboratory for Medical School.

A new laboratory and menagerie is to be built for the College of Physicians and Surgeons in West Sixtieth Street. Acting for Columbia University, Paul Kuhne, architect, has filed plans with the Building Department for the structure. It will be steel frame, filled in with cement plaster, and will cost $10,000. The menagerie will contain fourteen cages for animals.

NEW STYLE ROBBERY BY FLAT ATTENDANTS

Elevator and Hall Boys, Working Together, Got $5,000 Loot in the Hamilton Court.

GAVE IT TO YOUNG WOMEN

One Boy at Telephone Switchboard to Give Warning While the Others Got the Plunder—A Confession.

Four young men, the eldest 22 years old, will be brought up for examination in the Harlem Court to-morrow on charges of having conspired to rob tenants in the Hamilton Court apartment house at Hamilton Place and 143d Street, of jewelry trinkets, silverware, and wearing apparel worth upward of $5,000. Two of them were employed as hallboys in the house until their arrest on Saturday night, and the other two were connected with the apartment house also up to a short time ago.

The prisoners are Henry Dorethy, 22 years old, of 501 West 143d Street; James Hennessy, 17, of 2,360 Eighth Avenue; Charles Miller, 17, of 3,440 Broadway, and Robert Kyle, 17, of 616 West 137th Street, the first two being those most recently employed in the house. According to the police, Hennessy turned State's evidence, and he is now out on parole. The other three were held in $2,000 bail each.

Some of the stolen property has been recovered by the police, and they are hopeful of regaining most of the rest of the plunder. That recovered was found, according to the police, in the apartments in the upper west side of two young women to whose home two of the boys were trailed on Friday night. According to the police, the young women told a straightforward story of having received the stuff as presents from the boys, and the police, believing their stories, did not arrest them.

Suspicion was cast upon the boys first by Capt. Enos Fourette, a retired steamship Captain, who lives in the Hamilton Court apartments, and who was robbed of about $1,000 worth of property, including a $150 gold watch and a diamond necklace belonging to his wife. Capt. Fourette reported his loss to the Harlem Detective Bureau, as did the others in the house whose apartments were entered, but although Detectives Burdick and Ryan, as well as several other men, were put on the case, they were unable to get any trace of the thieves, whose operations began about two months ago. The detectives kept a watch on the house, and frequently were sent off on wild goose chases by the bellboys, who always had some false clue whenever one of the detectives put in an appearance.

On last Wednesday evening, however, Capt. Fourette, returning home after a walk in the afternoon, saw the hall boy at the telephone switchboard, and observed that he was ringing the bell of the Fourette apartment. He asked the boy what he was doing, and received the reply that the lad was calling a number at central.

"No, you're not," announced the Captain. "You were ringing my bell."

The boy declared that he was not, and the Captain let the incident pass, although it aroused his suspicions, and on the following day he reported the facts to the Harlem Detective Bureau. Burdick and Ryan determined to follow the boys for a few days, and on Friday the trail led to the apartments of the young women. When the boys had left, the detectives obtained admission, and by telling the young women of their suspicions obtained from them, they say, a complete account of how they had received the various articles from the boys.

On the next day the boys were arrested. Hennessy's confession, which the police say he made, revealed what appears to be a new method of robbing apartments in elevator apartment houses. According to the confession, the boy who remained in the lower hall to operate the telephone switchboard connecting with every apartment in the house and to run the elevator would tell his confederates when an apartment was left vacant by its occupants, and would give them a pass key which would admit them. While they hastened to ransack the apartment the boy in the entrance hall kept watch, and if the apartment owner returned before the confederates had left the apartment he notified them of the fact by ringing three quick rings on the telephone bell. Then he could delay the returning householder in the elevator long enough to let his companions escape into an upper or lower hall with what booty had been obtained.

Perhaps fifty families occupy apartments in the building, and of these the police say that at least a dozen have been robbed. The losses have varied in amounts from a few dollars to the $1,000 which Capt. Fourette suffered. All told, it is said, the young burglars must have obtained upward of $5,000.

$1,000 BURGLARY IN 143D ST.

J. W. Bennett the Latest Victim—Get a Dog, the Police Advise.

Burglars entered the apartment of J. W. Bennett, 511 West 143d Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, late last Saturday night, and when they went out again, $1,000 worth of jewelry and silverware went with them. The police of the West 153d Street Station were notified, but no arrests have been made.

Mr. and Mrs. Bennett left their apartment early in the evening to go to the theatre, and the colored maid went out later to visit some friends. Between 9 and 10 P. M., according to the elevator man, the burglars got on to the roof from the next house and pried open the scuttle of 511 West 143d Street, and went down the staircase to the sixth floor, where they broke open the door of an empty apartment next to Mr. Bennett's, and forced the bolt of his kitchen window from the fire escape.

After looting the drawers and trunks in the rooms of all the small portable articles of any value, the thieves left by the front door of the flat and walked down the staircase as far as the third floor, where they pushed the button for the elevator.

When the elevator came up in response to the summons, there was no one on the landing, but looking down the elevator man saw two men running down the staircase from the second floor, and as he was going down he heard the hall door bang.

No one was in sight when the elevator man looked out of the doorway, and, as he did not know that a robbery had been committed, he did not troube any further that night. When Mr. and Mrs. Bennett arrived home about 1 A. M. they saw instantly what had happened and notified the police.

Several burglaries in the same block in West 143d Street have been committed during the last three months, including a robbery in the house in which the Bennetts live. It was declared by one of the victims yesterday that when they complain to the police later, those in charge of the desk at the station take the particulars of the robbery and, after warning them not to give any information to the newspapers, wind up by advising them to get a dog.

ROBBERS GET 15 YEARS EACH.

Judge Fawcett, sitting in Part I. of the County Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, sent two men to Sing Sing for fifteen years for holding up a man on the street and robbing him of 65 cents. They are David Anderson of 97 Eagle Street and Michael Condon of 240 Kent Street. Both had been arrested before for similar offenses.

HAMMOND WON'T GO TO CHINA.

President Argues Two Hours with Him in Vain.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—John Hays Hammond to-day declined the post of Minister to China. The refusal was followed by a two-hour conference, in which President Taft used every argument to have the distinguished mining engineer reconsider. It was unavailing, for Mr. Hammond had determined that his duty to his family outweighed everything else, and he told the President so. Mr. Taft and Secretary Knox are disappointed, and they will again cast about for a suitable man for the place.

Mr. Hammond has a growing family, several of whom are now in schools and college. He would not think of removing to Peking without taking his wife and children with him. In this event the education of his children would be marred, a possibility that he declared he could not consider under any circumstances. Therefore, after earnest thought upon the relative duty to his country and his family he arrived at his decision.

Neither the President nor Mr. Knox will intimate upon whom the choice for the post will fall. The Administration is desirous of making an early appointment, for the present Minister, W. W. Rockhill, has been appointed Ambassador to Russia, and is only awaiting the selection of his successor to report at St. Petersburg. There are questions coming up soon between the Russian and the Chinese Governments also which render it desirable that the United States have a man at the Russian capital who understands the Chinese situation thoroughly.

The post at Peking has been the most troublesome of all to fill. Recognizing the necessity of having a Minister who would combine the qualities of a good business man with those of a diplomat, the President and Secretary Knox have taken great pains in making a selection. The growing importance of American trade in the Orient and the complicated political questions constantly arising in that part of the world because of the interests of the European powers there have made it imperative that the right man be chosen. Otherwise the United States, in the opinion of the Administration, will find itself in an embarrassing position both commercially and diplomatically.

Because of Mr. Taft's visits to China and Japan and the cordial personal relations established there, the Administration is anxious that nothing happen to disturb the good feeling now existing. The election of Mr. Taft was acclaimed in both the Eastern countries as presaging an era of peaceful and cordial relations, and as this may be made the basis for an extension of American trade the Administration is desirous of doing nothing that may jeopardize American opportunities.

TAFT WINS AT GOLF.

He and Gen. Edwards Defeat Vice President and Senator Bourne.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Taft and Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A., won a foursome by two up from Vice President Sherman and Senator Bourne of Oregon in a golf match played at the Chevy Chase links this afternoon. It was an ideal day for golf, and there were few on the links to interrupt the progress of the President and his partner.

The best individual score was made by Mr. Taft, who entered into the game with his usual enthusiasm. There were seven in the President's party, and the other three, Major Gen. Barry, John Hays Hammond, and Capt. Butt, military aide to the President, enjoyed a threesome while the other game was in progress.

H. H. ROGERS'S FORTUNE.

Guess That It May Be $100,000,000 Instead of Half That Goes Unconfirmed.

Mild interest was aroused in Wall Street yesterday by a circumstantial report that when the will of Henry H. Rogers is read his estate will be found to be nearer $100,000,000 than $50,000,000, as had been generally estimated.

The report had it that a large part of Mr. Rogers's fortune was not, as supposed, tied up in his Virginia Railway, and that his interest in this venture would prove to be only a small part of his vast capital.

None of those closely associated with Mr. Rogers in his lifetime would say a word in confirmation of the report. John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated Copper Company, said that nothing would be made public concerning Mr. Rogers's fortune until after his will is read, which will probably be to-morrow.

Wall Street meanwhile accepted the report as one of many guesses, few of which have been regarded as accurate.

METHODISTS HONOR HUYLER.

1,300 Members of That Church Attend a Dinner Given to Him.

Nearly 1,300 Methodists of this city attended a dollar dinner given by the Board of Managers of the New York City Church Extension and Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the society's forty-third anniversary, in honor of President John S. Huyler, last night. Samuel W. Bowne presided at the feast, which was held at Wanamaker's dining hall, Broadway and Ninth Street.

Seventy-three churches, missions, and homes were represented by delegations.

FREE LUMBER BEATEN BY BIG SENATE VOTE

Amendment Is Defeated, 56 to 25—Fifteen Republicans Bolt Committee's Rates.

PROTECT MILLS, SAYS ROOT

Pleads for Differential Duty on Dressed Lumber—Aldrich Opposes Bailey's Proposal for Income Tax Vote.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Senate this afternoon defeated the McCumber free lumber amendment to the Tariff bill by a vote of 56 to 25. Fifteen Republicans declared opposition to the lumber rates carried in the pending Tariff bill.

It is believed now that the duty on rough lumber will be increaesd from $1 a thousand to $1.50, while the differential on higher grades will be lessened. The fifteen Republicans who bolted to-day were in favor of Mr. McCumber's amendment putting rough and undressed lumber on the free list. On the other hand, Democratic support of the higher rate, which showed 17 strong to-day, will be retained by advancing the duty on rough lumber.

The bolters had several recruits to-day. Mr. Burton of Ohio, responding to the demand from his State, voted for the McCumber amendment. Mr. Curtis, who has supported the committee with fair regularity so far, did likewise, while Senator Du Pont, whose sole grievance against the committee is supposed to be in regard to higher protection for blasting caps, also voted for the lower duty. Mr. McCumber is a member of the committee.

The fifteen Republicans are: Beveridge, Indiana; Bristow, Kansas; Brown, Nebraska; Burkett, Nebraska; Burton, Ohio; Clapp, Minnesota; Crawford, South Dakota; Cummins, Iowa; Curtis, Kansas; Du Pont, Delaware; Gamble, South Dakota; Johnson, North Dakota; La Follette, Wisconsin; McCumber, North Dakota, and Nelson, Minnesota.

The seventeen Democrats who voted against the amendment are: Bacon, Georgia; Bailey, Texas; Bankhead, Alabama; Chamberlain, Oregon; Daniel, Virginia; Fletcher, Florida; Foster, Louisiana; Johnston, Alabama; McEnery, Louisiana; Martin, Virginia; Money, Mississippi; Overman, North Carolina; Simmons, North Carolina; Smith, North Dakota; Taliaferro, Florida; Tilman, South Carolina; Taylor, Tennessee.

Senator Root's Speech.

A feature of the debate to-day was the speech of Senator Root for the high differentials of the present bill. It was Mr. Root's first speech on the floor since his castigation by the older Senators a week ago, and attracted considerable attention. Mr. Root recited the list of Canadian mills just across the border, and predicted that the removal of the differential would give the high grade finninshing of lumber to our Canadian rivals.

The debate on lumber to-day was largely a repetition of speeches delivered to the empty Chamber on Saturday, and the same difficulty was experienced in retaining a quorum. The higher duties were defended by Senators Root, Dolliver, Heyburn, and Borah, while Senators McCumber and Clapp spoke for free lumber.

Senator Bailey of Texas warmly defended the duty on lumber as a revenue measure, and(in a colloquy that ensued, attacked the position of President Cleveland, while Senator Aldrich defended the Democratic President's memory.

The duty on lumber, said Mr. Bailey, is only 12 per cent., and such a duty can only be considered a revenue measure, bringing, as it does, $1,700,000 a year to the Treasury.

Aldrich Delays Income Tax Vote.

At the conclusion of his remarks Senator Bailey asked that Thursday be fixed as a date for the final vote on the income tax. Senator Aldrich objected on the ground that the date for the final vote on the bill must be first agreed on, and Mr. Bailey replied that the final vote would not be reached until his income tax plan had been decided. He promised to object to every motion on Mr. Aldrich's part looking to fixing the date.

It is believed now that Senator Aldrich's object in refusing to allow a vote on the income tax is simply that he wants to use that vote as a bait to induce the insurgents and Democrats to agree on a final date. As to the income tax itself, interest has largely fallen off in that since it became apparent that the Democrats and insurgents could not work together.

There was an informal meeting to-day between Mr. Bailey, Mr. Borah, and Mr. Cummins, and they definitely decided that an agreement between the Democratic and Republican income tax bills could not be reached.

When the sugar schedule is taken up to-morrow Mr. Newlands will attack the present duties as too high and Senator Burrows will defend them. The question is complicated by an extremely technical method of classification, but the contention of the insurgents is that the reduction of 5 cents a hundred pounds effected by the House bill is too small. The Louisiana Senators will vote with the machine for the higher duty.

$51,000,000 STORE CHAIN.

Speculations Here on Newest Combine—London Thinks It a Benefit.

The dry goods trade was still speculating yesterday on the purpose and constituent parts of the United Dry Goods Company, the new $51,000,000 corporation formed under Delaware laws, but nothing came out to aid the guesses made about it. At the office of John Claflin, President of the H. B. Claflin Company, who is generally credited with being instrumental in the formation of the new corporation, and who has admitted that he is interested, it was said yesterday that Mr. Claflin was not yet ready to give out his promised statement, and in the meantime no information was available.

Among the rumors in the trade generally, none of which professed to be backed by any inside information, was one that the United Dry Goods Company would open or acquire a chain of large department stores in the big centres throughout the country. It was pointed out that the Associated Merchants' Company, of which Mr. Claflin is President, already controls, besides three large retail stores in this city, large houses in Baltimore, Newark, Pittsburg, Buffalo, Nashville, Louisville, Augusta, Montgomery, Cincinnati, Toledo, Grand Rapids, Minneapolis, Denver, Butte, and Tacoma.

It was also suggested that the new corporation as a simple holding company would be of great service to Mr. Claflin in simplifying the financial operations connected with the great concerns in which he is the master spirit. At present it must be difficult to keep the affairs of so many kindred companies absolutely distinct, and if all of them were united in one corporation their management would be greatly simplified.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—An interesting opinion regarding the organization of the new United Dry Goods Company announced by cable from New York was that expressed to-day by Henry Selfridge of "Selfridge's." Mr. Selfridge regards the new undertaking as a simple extension of Claflin's system.

"Its effect," said he, "if energetically promoted, will be simply to intensify competition in certain localities. I see nothing dangerous in it, and I am not financially interested in the remotest degree.

"It is, of course, absolutely impossible to monopolize the dry goods trade. No amount of competition can wholly wipe out the little fellows. This extension of the Claflin interests, therefore, is more likely to benefit than to harm the general public."

SHAKESPEARE IN SCHOOLYARD

Riverdale Boys Present "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"Nay, let me not play a woman; I have a beard coming" was probably considered an extremely funny line in Elizabethan times, but it never drew forth more laughter perhaps than yesterday when it was uttered by Watson O'Connor, the Flute in the production of scenes from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" which he boys of the Riverdale School presented on their own lawn.

Master Watson O'Connor undoubtedly has a beard coming in several years, but the keenest search on the part of his Athenian friends did not enable them to discover any present traces of it.

Behind the schoolhouse, on a rising slope framed in dogwood blossoms, such scenes of the play were enacted as could be compressed into an hour. The Athenian lover scenes were all omitted, and so the play resolved itself into the fairy scenes and those between Bottom, the Weaver, and his companions, ending, of course, with the performance of "Pyramus and Thisbe."

The air was soft and balmy, the sun shone brightly, and before the boys, who had been "making up" in the stables, were ready to appear the chairs on the lawn were filled. Then some one at a piano in the house played some of the Mendelssohn incidental music for the play and proceedings began, when Bottom and his companions appeared, walking up the hillside. They were all small boys of 10 or thereabouts, but they spoke their lines with great intelligence, and they certainly looked Atheninan with their costumes and beards.

But the fairies in the play received the most attention. They wore golden wigs and silver wings and blue frocks, which concealed the knickerbockers they wore underneath. Two babies in the audience were so much excited by these tinseled beings that they crawled out of their mothers' laps across the driveway, which served to separate the audience from the bank which was used as a stage, and were half way toward the fairies before they were captured by their parents and led, howling lustily, into the retirement of the front lawn.

The lion was a big success also, and nearly frightened two more babies into fits, and when Flute, in the character of Thisbe cried "Asleep, my love! What! Dead, my love!" the entire audience was seized with uncontrollable fits of laughter.

The "Pyramus and Thisbe" scene was strikingly well done, as were several other bits. To John C. Seager as Puck most of the acting honors went. This small boy read the Shakespearean lines with great intelligence and a beautiful voice. In appearance he was ideal for the part. George Ernst as Bottom also was clever.

After the bow which the audience demanded at the end of the play the entire party, actors, audience, and all joined the babies on the front lawn for tea, and those youngsters played with fairies wings to their hearts' content.

MAY WHEAT GOES HIGHER.

Shorts Have to Buy from Patten, Whose Profits Increase.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—As the end of May approaches, shorts in that option of wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade are hustling to get rid of their commitments. There is only one man to whom they can go for wheat, and that is the same man who bought the options from them earlier in the year, James A. Patten.

The demand upon him was so great to-day that he was able to boost the price up nearly 2 cents, to $1.34¾, thereby adding to his already large profits. Every day reports of the growing crop get worse. On Saturday one of the large railroad systems operating in the Southwest sent out a report of a big shortage in Kansas. This was followed by a report from a well-known crop expert saying that instead of 80,000,000 bushels for Kansas, the crop of that State, and Oklahoma besides, would hardly reach the 80,000,000 mark unless great improvement in weather conditions takes place immediately.

Other options besides the May have shown signs of strength lately, and September led, advancing at one time 3¼ cents, and closed almost 3 cents higher than Saturday. The strength of this particular option was due to the combined purchases of Armour and Patten. The Armour house was active in the grain market, and paid particular attention to the September wheat, selling at the same time a quantity of wheat for December delivery as an offset.

On the other hand, the Patten house was a buyer of both the September and December, and was seller of May and July. Close observers in the pits say Patten has been selling his May wheat to the shorts all this month, and some of them believe his sales since his return to the city two weeks ago have averaged 250,000 bushels a day. To-day he is said to have sold nearer 500,000. When asked if he was cleaned out of the May wheat, he replied:

"Oh, I guess there will be enough to last until the end of the month."

Some of the traders seem to think Patten's manipulation in the September wheat is for the purpose of frightening would-be deliverers of wheat from making deliveries. Shorts, who actually have the wheat to deliver, would hesitate to let go their actual wheat if the prospects looked bright to sell it at higher prices for July or September delivery, and would rather take their loss on the May options, which they are short.

SHERIFF HELD FOR ALLOWING LYNCHING

Supreme Court Declares J. F. Shipp of Chattanooga and Deputies in Contempt.

HAD GRANTED AN APPEAL

Jail Not Properly Guarded, Court Says—One Justice Dissents—Sheriff Had Criticised Court.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The case of John F. Shipp, Sheriff of Hamilton County, Tenn., and nine others, charged with contempt of the Supreme Court of the United States in connection with the lynching of a negro named Ed Johnson at Chattanooga in March, 1905, was finally disposed of by that court to-day in an opinion by Chief Justice Fuller, which directed that an attachment issue for Shipp, his deputy, Gibson, and Defendants Williams, Nolan, Padgett, and May. The information as to Deputy Sheriff Galloway and Justice and Ward, three of the defendants, was dismissed.

The charge of contempt against Sheriff Shipp and his codefendants was due to the fact that when Johnson was lynched he was constructively in the custody of the court. Only a month before the negro had been found guilty of assault and had been sentenced to death. The Supreme Court had taken cognizance of the case by granting an appeal from a decision of the United States Circuit Court denying him a writ of habeas corpus, which effected a stay of proceedings in the convict's case.

The appeal was allowed March 19, and that night Johnson was taken out of the jail at Chattanooga and hanged. This action was strongly resented by the court, and immediate complaint was made to President Roosevelt, who ordered an investigation by the Department of Justice.

The case aroused much interest in the South because not only of the exceptional character of the proceeding, but because of the popularity of Mr. Shipp and the character of Johnson's crime. Justice Harlan exercised an especial activity in bringing the lynching to the attention of the authorities. He had been the first member of the court to take notice of the offense, and he seemed most keenly to feel the indignity to the court implied by the lynching.

The Supreme Court will, on next Tuesday, undertake to mete out punishment to Sheriff Shipp and the other defendants for the crime of contempt of the court itself.

Many Threats of Lynching.

Reviewing the proceedings in the case of Johnson, the negro, who was lynched, the Chief Justice pointed out that even before the case was brought to the Supreme Court there had been many threats of lynching because of the serious character of the negro's offense. Continuing he said of the proceeding on the night of the lynching:

"The assertions that mob violence was not expected and that there was no occasion for providing more than the usual guard of one man for the jail in Chattanooga are quite unreasonable and inconsistent with statements made by Sheriff Shipp and his deputies that they were looking for a mob on the next day."

The Chief Justice pointed out that the jail had been left entirely ungarded and in charge of Deputy Gibson, when every precaution to guard the prisoner should have been taken.

The Chief Justice quoted liberally from an interview given out by Shipp some days after the lynching, in which Shipp said he did not "attempt to hurt any of the mob," and in which he charged the Supreme Court with the responsibility for the lynching, because of its interference in the case. Commenting on this utterance, the Chief Justice said:

"He evidently resented the necessary order of this court as an alien intrusion, and declared that the court was responsible for the lynching. According to him 'the people of Hamilton County were willing to let the law take its course, until it became known that the case would not probably be disposed of for four or five years by the Supreme Court of the United States.'

"In view of this, Shipp's failure to make the slightest preparation to resist the mob; the absence of all of the deputies, except Gibson, from the jail during the mob's proceeding, occupying a period of some hours in the early evening; the action of Shipp in not resisting the mob, and his failure to make any reasonable effort to save Johnson or identify the members of the mob justify the inference of a disposition upon his part to render it easy for the mob to lynch Johnson, and to acquiesce in the lynching."

The Chief Justice also declared that after Johnson was taken from the jail the Sheriff had made no effort to go after the lynchers or to reach the police or militia.

The Dissenting Opinion.

In the dissenting opinion of Justice Peckham, which was concurred in by Justices White and McKenna, there was also a complete review of the case, and in this opinion the conclusion arrived at was quite contrary to that of a majority of the court. It was held by the dissenters that there was no evidence whatever connecting Sheriff Shipp or his Deputy with any part in the lynching conspiracy. After detailing all the circumstances leading up to the lynching and telling of Mr. Shipp's going to the jail, Justice Peckham said:

"The Sheriff was 63 years of age at this time, and, on account of his physical condition, unable in any event to have offered any great resistance. There were at least ten or fifteen of the men around him who were armed, and the sequel proved that many more in the crowd were also armed. Others were standing back looking on. Whether the Sheriff might possibly have been quicker with his gun and taken it out of his pocket and shot some of them, is not certain, from the evidence, but the odds of even ten or fifteen to one are somewhat large, and that he did not kill, or attempt to kill, any of them is no evidence whatever of complicity with these miscreants, and certainly no evidence of contempt of this court. It seems to me most extraordinary that even an official under these circumstances can be found guilty of a contempt because in fact he did not resist to the death."

Special to The New York Times.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 24.—The decision of the United States Supreme Court in the contempt case of Sheriff J. F. Shipp and his deputies, ordering the defendants to appear in Washington June 1 for sentence, came as a surprise and shock to Chattanooga. It had a tendency to stop the tongues of lawyers and all connected with the case, and it has been next to impossible to obtain the opinion of such persons. The trend of feeling, however, is of sympathy for the convicted ex-Sheriff and his men, and should the aged veteran ever be sentenced to a prison term he would go to his imprisonment with the full confidence of the people of this county.

Ex-Sheriff Shipp apparently is taking his conviction very much to heart. It was reported on the streets to-night that he had dropped dead when he learned of the decision, and the rumor caused much excitement until it was proved untrue.

LOEB AND MACVEAGH CONFER ON FRAUDS

Admit That Detectives Have Obtained Clues Against Men High Up in Customs Service.

TO MAKE VIGOROUS INQUIRY

Secretary Says That Antique Methods Employed in Weighing Seemed to Invite Dishonesty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Collector Loeb of the Port of New York had a long conference to-day with Secretary MacVeagh and Assistant Secretary J. B. Reynolds, concerning the smuggling cases and the sugar-weighing frauds in his division of the customs service. The entire situation was discussed, and the proposed changes in the manner of weighing goods were thoroughly gone into.

Although Mr. MacVeagh, Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Loeb would not say just what phases of the investigation were considered at the conference, it was acknowledged that the clues gathered by the secret operatives of the department, working under Mr. Loeb's direction, pointed accusingly toward men in high places in the New York service. Beyond this the officials would say nothing.

"It stands to reason that some men high up are implicated," said Mr. Reynolds, "or the smaller fry would not have been able to pursue their activities."

Mr. Reynolds added that the inquiry would be pursued vigorously and as quickly as possible.

Secretary MacVeagh said that he and Mr. Loeb were trying to correct some of the crudities in the system hitherto employed in the New York Custom House. He said that he had made personal inspections and observations of some of the methods employed, and was surprised at their antiquity and crudity. He had seen Government weighers weighing a large consignment of coffee in five-bag lots on ancient steelyards, and, while this occupied a great deal of unnecessary time, he found that there was absolutely no check upon the weigher except the invoice of the shipper. If there was no dishonest weighing in articles of this character, it was not because there were no opportunities that seemed almost to invite fraud.

The Secretary also said that he had observed sugar in cargo lots being discharged from the ship into lighters, which were towed away to private docks, where they remained from one day to a month unobserved by any Government official. The Secretary said that nobody could tell whether the same number of bags of sugar were finally weighed into the refinery as were taken from the ship. The Secretary said that this method of unloading sugar would be changed and Government officials would take charge of the sugar at the expense of the importer until the duties were paid.

The Treasury officials expect satisfactory results from the new electrical weighing machines that are to be installed. The weighers who have the best records will receive transfers until all vacancies are filled.

Mr. Loeb returned to New York to-night.

Much uneasiness was felt yesterday in local customs circles when it was learned that Collector Loeb was in Washington conferring with the Treasury officials regarding administrative reforms at this port.

Another matter engaging the Collector's attention at the present time is salaries. It is understood that Mr. Loeb has made recommendations for increases in compensation among certain classes of employes, to become effective at the beginning of the new fiscal year July 1.

PLAN TAFT'S PITTSBURG TRIP.

President Will Spend Saturday and Sunday as Guest of His Sister-in-Law.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Senator Dillingham and Gov. Prouty of Vermont talked with the President to-day regarding the plans for his attendance at the tercentenary celebration of the discovery of Lake Champlain. The celebration is to be conducted jointly by the States of New York and Vermont. It was arranged that the President will be at Fort Ticonderoga on July 6; that he will spend July 7 at Plattsburg, N. Y., and July 9 at Burlington, leaving the 8th open. The President hopes to go direct from Burlington to Beverly, Mass.

The details of President Taft's trip to Pittsburg, Penn., the latter part of this week have been completed. He will spend all of Saturday and Sunday in Pittsburg as the guest of Mrs. Taft's sister, Mrs. Laughlin. It is not known whether Mrs. Taft will be able to make the trip or not. The President will attend Saturday morning the dedication of a fountain in Arsenal Park, will be entertained at luncheon by the Pittsburg Yale Alumni at the Allegheny Country Club, and will speak at the banquet of the Associated Western Yale Clubs Saturday night.

The President will leave Pittsburg late Sunday night in order to reach Gettysburg early Monday morning, where he is to deliver the Memorial Day address.

CONEY ISLAND GETS A SUDDEN SETBACK

After a Wide-Open Sunday the Police Call for Wholesale Warrants.

WANTED 75, GOT ONLY 10

All of the Amusement Managers in Alarm—Other Resorts to Be Watched.

Amazement seized the proprietors of Coney Island resorts yesterday when they learned that the police had asked Magistrate Tighe, in the Island's Police Court, for seventy-five warrants for running shows on Sunday.

The amusement purveyors thought, when the police did not molest them on Sunday, that their troubles were over. They went to bed satisfied that there would be a wide-open Coney all Summer. When they woke up they found things in a turmoil again.

The warrants were sought by Detectives George Davis and Joseph Miller, who acted under instructions from Capt. Thomas Palmer, in charge of the island. The detectives had made the rounds of the resorts on Sunday, and, from agreeable remarks they dropped, the amusement proprietors considered that everything must be running in strict conformity with the police idea.

It turned out that the police were simply getting evidence. When the detectives asked Magistrate Tighe to issue the sevnty-five warrants he promptly refused. He told the detectives he would let them have warrants for the arrest of ten proprietors, covering the various forms of amusements that they regarded as operating in violation of the law, but that would be all.

The detectives went to the police station and conferred with Capt. Palmer. A list of ten men was made out, and for these Magistrate Tighe issued the warrants. It is not known who the defendants are, Magistrate Tighe making the warrants returnable to-morrow and the police preferring to be mysterious about it until then.

When word of the warrants got around the island the amusement men made wry faces. They talked of calling another mass meeting like that of last week to frame up a protest, but this idea did not make much headway, owing to the doubt as to the exact nature of the amusements aimed at through the warrants. The impression obtained, as the day wore on, that it would be better to wait and see what happens when the ten men are taken to court.

Frederic Thompson tried to find out if Luna Park had been mentioned in a warrant, but he considered this quite unlikely owing to his precaution in having designated all the shows there as "educational."

It is believed that the police want to make test cases of all the amusements at the island, and that the warrants issued will be vigorously pushed. The police, it is said, wish to have the whole affair disposed of at once so they will not be kept busy making raids all Summer at the island.

Magistrate Tighe laid down the law to the police, who arrested five waiters for selling drinks at concert halls. The police told him the drinks were served without the customary Raines law sandwich. The Magistrate found the police had not called for sandwiches and told them they would have to do that if there was none in sight before he would consider such cases. He dismissed the defendants.

Police Commissioner Bingham was silent when asked about the warrants for Coney Island showmen. He arrived at the City Hall shortly after Mayor McClellan returned from Princeton, and they conferred for some time. Neither would say what it was about. Later in the day the Mayor said:

"From the information I have received I should judge that things went along very smoothly at the island yesterday, and that it was one of the most orderly Sundays the resort has seen for some time."

The Mayor laughed when it was suggested that the application of the police for warrants for violations of the Sunday law was somewhat of a surprise after the lack of interference on Sunday. He was asked if this plan of campaign had been decided upon by him and Gen. Bingham on Saturday, and replied, "Let the record answer that." He added that the police have the situation well in hand, and that the matter will continue to be regulated to the satisfaction of the public.

When it was pointed out that Gen. Bingham has declared that he will not interfere with "the inncent amusements of the people," the Mayor said:

"But it must be remembered that illegal amusements cannot be classed as innocent."

The Mayor seemed inquisitive about the date of the opening of Rockaway and the other beach resorts, and intimated strongly that they would be as closely watched as Coney Island. Inspector Kelly, who assisted Inspector Russell at Coney Island on Sunday, will have charge of the Rockaway police this Summer.

Senator McCarren made his weekly call on the Mayor, and when he left the City Hall admitted that they had talked over the Coney Island situation. Mr. McCarren said he did not believe there was any politics in the Mayor's stand, adding, "If there is, it is not aimed at me, anyway."

The Senator says he believes Coney Island is a little different from any other part of the city, and should be treated accordingly. "It is one big playground," said he. "The people go down there and eat a little and drink a little and have a good time generally, and I don't believe they are subjected to demoralization or immorality in so doing."

STARRETT SUES FOR PROFITS.

Founder of Thompson-Starrett Company Said to Have Violated Agreement

Theodore Starrett, founder of the Thompson-Starett Company, one of the largest contracting concerns in this country, is the plaintiff in a suit on trial before Supreme Court Justice Gerard, under which he demands an accounting from the company for his share of the profits, which, according to the complaint, amount to several hundred thousand dollars.

The complaint shows that the company was organized by Mr. Starrett and H. S. Thompson in 1899 with a capital of $100,000. Under this management the concern grew to such proportions that in May, 1903, it was reorganized with a capital of $1,000,000, common stock. Of this amount $650,000 was furnished through Clarence H. Kelsey, President of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and the remaining $350,000 by Mr. Starrett.

An agreement was entered into by which Mr. Starrett and his brothers, Goldwin, Ralph, and W. A. Starrett, were to receive 65 per cent. of 50 per cent. of the profits of the business for a period of ten years. It was also agreed that Theodore Starrett was to become President of the concern, and was to have charge of the construction work. This agreement remained in force until Jan. 20, 1907, when Theodore Starrett's connection with the company was severed.

Shortly after this he began the present action for an accounting as to his share of the profits of the business and for the enforcement of his rights under the contract. A large amount is involved in the litigation. Mr. Starrett also seeks to have the court direct that certain assets of the company be sold at auction. Among them is the property at the southwest corner of Forty-second Street and Madison Avenue, on which to erect a thirty-story hotel plans were recently submitted to the Building Department. Mr. Starrett asserts that the Thompson-Starrett Company is now under the control of Clarence H. Kelsey.

Mr. Starrett was on the stand yesterday and bore out his allegation in the complaint. This closed his side of the case, and Morgan J. O'Brien, counsel for the company, made a motion to dismiss the complaint, which was denied. The defense will be opened this morning. Charles Green Smith and John Willett represent Mr. Starrett.

BRYCE TALKS OF UNITY.

British Ambassador at Empire Day Dinner Says Both Nations Stand for Peace

Ambassador James Bryce of England was the guest of honor last night at the dinner of the British Schools and Colleges Club of this city on the anniversary of the late Queen Victoria's birthday—Empire Day. Sitting to the right of the toastmaster, George Massey, to the left of Dr. John H. Finley, President of the City College, and under the flags of the United Kingdom and the United States, he was called upon to respond to the toast to "the Empire."

Mr. Bryce, introduced as "a man of whom we Britishers and we United Statesers are equally proud," said in part:

"To the United States we owe the propagation of our stock and the spread of those traditional institutions which our ancestors worked out together.

"To the United States and to us is committed the charge of those institutions, and for ourselves interest in the United States should only be second to that in the British Empire. I feel that this feeling grows stronger and stronger. There were days when there was a certain amount of jealousy. I am glad to think that those days are past. I am convinced that the feeling in the last few years has grown warmer and warmer between these two branches of the race. I believe that the United States is attached to our country and has faith in the value of our mission toward the world."

Ambassador Bryce compared the way in which the empire had grown to the way in which a man who had fallen through the ice found it necessary to flounder on the rough ice till he reached shore. So it was with India, he said. "We got a hold somewhere, but to maintain it, we had to push on until we had everything. But we didn't in the least intend to do that when we began.

"Why did we take Canada? For the sake of the good people of these thirteen colonies. Why did we take New York? The Dutch had it before us, but we had New England to the north and Virginia to the south, and we needed a middle.

"People talk now of a new constitution regarding the colonies, but I believe such a suggestion should come from them, or at least be projected with their willingness. I believe they would stand with us now as strongly as ever, but I see no cause for war anywhere in the world."

Mr. Bryce's speech had followed toasts accompanied with cheers for the King and then for the President. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman followed the silent toast to the Queen. Dr. Finlay also spoke. All the speakers referred feelingly to Victoria and the strength of her reign.

Charles Johnston, with the subject "British Schools and Universities," was the last speaker. At the head table there were also the Rev. Arthur H. Judge and Lawrence Godkin.

DISAGREE ON TERMINAL CASE.

Judges Send St. Louis Railroad Suit Direct to Supreme Court.

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—Disagreeing, two against two on the Government's suit to dissolve the Terminal Railroad Association of St. Louis, Judges Sanborn, Van Deventer, Hook, and Adams of the United States Circuit Court have certified the case direct to the United States Supreme Court.

The suit was brought in November, 1906, Charles Nagel, now Secretary of Commerce and Labor, being one of the special attorneys of the Government. It was alleged that the association was a consolidation of parallel and competing roads and ferry and bridge companies, engaged in inter-State commerce, in violation of the Federal statutes. The case was argued here in April.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 24.—Judge Adams, one of the Judges, who signed the order certifying the St. Louis Terminal Railroad Association case to the United States Supreme Court, said to-day:

"The Court finding itself evenly divided as to whether there was a restraint of trade or an enhanced competition, certified the case directly to the Supreme Court. Two of the Judges found that the combination was in restraint of trade and that the association should be dissolved. The other two were of the opinion that these bridges or approaches were not railroad bridges, but merely terminal facilities, giving all railroads approach to the city and affording the people ample opportunities to go or come from all parts of the city. Finding the court so evenly divided we merely certified all the papers in the case directly to the Supreme Court under an act authorizing the court to do so."

ADAPTABILITY is the salient feature of Whole Carpets. There is a quality for every room in the house. The design and the coloring are made to suit the exact environment, whether conditions demand the French Periods of decoration, the Georgian, or any other style. Requirements as to size may be easily satisfied.

Briefly, our Whole Carpet is thus described: Woven of the finest quality of wool; made from sketches prepared by our own artists; no seams; the principal weaves for selection—French Aubusson and Savonnerie, English Hand Tufted, Scotch Chenille Axminster, Berlin, India and Turkish; requires three to nine months to weave. Samples and sketches are ready for inspection.

Summer Rugs

Oriental

Incidental to our moving into new and larger quarters, we purchased heavily in the Eastern markets early in the year. Prices were low, and, following our usual custom, we are offering these Oriental Rugs at just a fair margin over the actual Importation Cost. Among them is a large lot especially desirable for summer houses which we were able to mark at very attractive prices.

Domestic

We also offer for summer houses a variety of cool, artistically colored Domestic Rugs at moderate prices.

Of these, THE BUNGALOW RUG is a great favorite. It is a durable, hand-woven wool rug, seamless, reversible, and made in solid colors, with plain band borders. Special sizes and combinations of color made to order at the stock price—$3.00 per sq. yard.

We always like to show rugs and to talk rugs. It is no trouble—we consider it a privilege. You will find our rugs genuine and prices very reasonable. Come and inspect our offerings whether you intend to make an immediate purchase or not.

LONDON TAKES BEST CARE OF DEFECTIVES

Dr. Lindley Praises Outdoor Schools for Weak and Backward Children of Poor.

MADE TO REST AFTER WORK

Investigator Says American Cities Are Far Behind in Such Work—Advises English System Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 24.—Dr. Walter Lindley of Los Angeles is about to return to America with his wife, after two months spent in Europe and mainly devoted to the study of the problem of the prophylactic treatment of the physically deficient or morbidly disposed children of the poor. He is most hopeful of what may be done in this field, particularly in the suppression of tuberculosis.

Dr. Lindley is the commissioner appointed by the State of California to investigate the subject, and the representative likewise of the Children's Aid Society of New York. He examined with great care the special schools both in Paris and in London for defective and morbidly disposed chilren.

"I have been deeply impressed," said he, "by the schools in London of this kind. London is in this respect far in advance of any American city, and has established outdoor schools, which I consider most beneficial for the children of the poor who are weak, abnormally backward, or inclined to disease. I can speak only with the utmost admiration of such schools as that in Lordship's Lane, Stoke-Newington, where ninety unfortunate little ones, besides receiving ordinary mental instruction, are taught gardening and other outdoor work. They receive a wholesome and hearty luncheon at school, and before returning to their homes are made to lie down and rest two hours in the afternoon either on cots or on the ground, according to bodily conition.

"The effect is to correct morbid physical tendencies, to strengthen the body, gradually to inure the child to fatigue and exposure, and to stimulate mental action at the same time. I hope very strongly that this method will be adopted in America."

MEXICO FREES AMERICANS.

Supreme Court Revokes Murder Sentences of Finstand and Coughener.

CHIHUAHUA, Mex., May 24.—The Mexico Supreme Court to-day ordered the release of Ole E. Finstand and "Shorty" Coughener, Americans, convicted of the murder of Charles McMurray and Robert Rutherford, the latter a wealthy Philadelphian. McMurray was the brother-in-law of Finstand.

McMurray and Rutherford were killed at the ranch of Finstand in Chihuahua. Coughener was badly wounded at the same time. Finstead and Coughener asserted that the crimes were committed by Mexican bandits, but the Mexican courts convicted the two Americans and sentenced them to imprisonment in the penitentiary at Chihuahua for twelve and a half years.

The Supreme Court to-day reversed the case and dismissed the charges.

Finstand is a wealthy citizen of Los Angeles, Cal., and made a fortune in the Klondike.

PLAGUE AGAIN AT CARACAS.

Government Promises Vigorous Sanitary Campaign.

CARACAS, May 24.—After an absence of six months the bubonic plague has again made its reappearance at Caracas. One case is officially under examination. The rats of Caracas show infection. No case has been found at La Guayra, or elsewhere in the Republic. The Government authorities to-day announced that they would make no secret of the existing conditions, and that they purposed to adopt strong measures of sanitation in fulfillment of the Washington convention. A surgeon of the American Marine Hospital Service is expected to reach La Guayra shortly, where he will be attached to the American Consulate. He is coming from San Francisco.

Acting upon recommendations made by the Sanitary Commission, President Gomez has issued a decree making vaccination against smallpox compulsory throughout the Republic. This ruling applies to native and foreigners alike, and severe fines and imprisonment will be imposed upon persons ignoring it.

INDIAN WRECK KILLS TEN.

Natives Victims of Collision Between Freight Cars and Passenger Train.

SIMLA, India, May 24.—Ten natives were killed and fourteen others sustained injuries in a collision yesterday morning near Dehra between some runaway freight cars and a passenger train. Sixteen freight cars got away and crashed down an incline into the passenger train.

All the cars and the engine were piled up in a twisted mass of wreckage.

CALLS COLLEGES GODLESS.

Dr. Cochran Holds Them Responsible for Lack of Young Ministers.

DENVER, Col., May 24.—"Grace is not usually said over champagne and lobster à la Newburg, and students for the ministry do not as a rule get their early training by running steam yachts," said Dr. Joseph W. Cochran of Philadelphia, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Education, to-day, in addressing the Presbyterian General Assembly on the lack of recruits for the ministry.

"Why can't we get the young men to preach? In the first place there is but little Christianity in the home. If there is any, it is gone by the time the young man is ready for an education.

"Does he go for his education to a Christian school? He goes to a Godless State university, and when he returns to his home town he puts religion at a low ebb. We cannot Christianize these State universities, but we can put a shepherd in charge, and in this way keep these boys in the flock."

Lack of funds was complained of by the American Tract Society. Dr. Judson Swift of New York, its Secretary, said that it could do five times as much work with twice as much money as it receives.

"Even the Board of Foreign Missions has come to us," he declared. "It wants us to print an arithmetic for the people of Uganda. I suppose they want to compute the number of lions, tigers, and giraffes slain by our beloved former President."

FERRERO ON MONEY POWER.

Says It Has Influence Here Which Europe Would Not Tolerate.

PARIS, May 24.—Continuing his analysis of conditions in the United States in letters to the Figaro, Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, finds that the moral revulsion which was produced by recent revelations was quickly transformed into a movement not only to impose a severer system of ethics upon high finance, but to curb the wealth power as well. A veritable wave of Jacobinism swept over the country, and the demand for Draconian legislation was so strong that the rival parties vied with each other in promises of reform.

"Combinations of capital," says the historian, "became the object of scandal, prosecution, and legislation, and leagues were formed everywhere to fight political corruption, which was the dangerous weapon possessed by high finance."

Signor Ferrero uses Pittsburg as an example of the manner in which the Augean stables have been cleaned, and cites the New York public service law as an illustration of the tremendous power conferred upon the authorities charged with watching operations of corporations. He was informed that it was not a commission, but a "committee of public safety." Although Signor Ferrero is of the opinion that the "American financial oligarchy," despite its vices, is playing a great part in the development of the resources of the country, he says that the power and influence the money combinations have acquired in America would not be tolerated in Europe, "accustomed for centuries to authoritative régimes."

AWTOW MINES TO RESUME.

Japanese Remove Restrictions and Suspend Exorbitant Royalties.

AMOY, China, May 24.—The development of the Awtow iron mines, located fifty miles northwest of Tsuantsiu has been resumed. Work on this enterprise has been suspended for the past ten months because of the exorbitant royalties demanded by the Government, from 30 to 50 per cent., and as a result of the Japanese protest against the employment of other than Japanese engineers. These difficulties have now been removed; British or American engineers are to be employed, and the payment of royalties has been temporarily suspended. They may be later assessed at from 5 to 20 per cent. of the output.

An old report by an English expert says that the magnetic iron ore at these mines is 90 per cent. pure, and sufficient to supply the world for four centuries. The Awtow district is rich in coal, lead, limestone, and other minerals, and the distance to tidewater is only fifty miles.

A Chinese company was organized about a year and a half ago to operate the properties mentioned in the above dispatch. It has a capital of $2,000,000, and the development of the mines includes the construction of fifty miles of narrow gauge railroad.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

PANAMA, May 24.—The action of the Panaman Government in expelling from the republic several Colombians who had been using Panama as the base of a conspiracy directed against President Rafael Reyes of Colombia has been universally approved. The first batch of intriguers was sent away yesterday; a number of others will be forced to leave the republic to-morrow.

CARACAS, May 24.—Senor Velez-Goiticoa, until recently Venezuelan Charge d'Affaires at Berlin, left here to-day for New York, where he will make an endeavor to settle the claim of the United States and Venezuela Company, known also as the Crichfield case, instead of having it go before The Hague Board of Arbitration.

LONDON, May 24.—The International Petroleum Standardization Commission held a preliminary meeting in London to-day to arrange the programme for the congress, which meets to-morrow. The real business of attempting to arrange standard methods for the testing of petroleum throughout the world will then be begun. The American delegate to the Congress, Dr. Day, is expected to reach London to-night.

BERLIN, May 24.—The Foreign Office has no information regarding the reported conclusion of a military treaty between Austria-Hungary and Japan providing for mutual help in the event that either power should become engaged in war with Russia, and consequently Germany is not in a position either to approve of the agreement, as alleged, or to disapprove of it.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—Premier Stolypin to-day introduced in the Duma a bill prolonging the mandates of the representatives in the Council of the Empire of the nine western provinces for a year, to enable the passage of a measure, which has recently been prepared, limiting the Poles to three members of the Council.

JAIL FOR SARGENTS; CRUEL TO CHILDREN

Two Years for Englishman and 13 Months for American Wife, Found Guilty in Paris.

WOMAN WEEPS IN COURT

Guards Save Her from Furious Parent of Adopted Child—Man Admits Punishing Children When Intoxicated.

PARIS, May 24.—On the charge of having maltreated young children confided to their care, Cecil H. Sargent, an Englishman, and his American wife, who was Josephine Savin of New York, were found guilty in the Correctional Court to-day. Sargent was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and his wife to thirteen months' imprisonment. In addition, a small fine was imposed on each of the defendants.

Witnesses testified that the Sargents had beaten the children and deprived them of food. One of the last witnesses, Mme. Marechal of Brussels, declared that she had confided her child to the Sargents five years ago and had not until recently heard any tidings of it. In a burst of ungovernable fury she threw herself at the throat of Mrs. Sargent and tried to strangle her. Guards pulled the enraged woman away with difficulty.

Mrs. Sargent, in the course of the trial, broke down, weepingly protested her great love for the children, and denied that she had ever more than slapped them. The husband also denied that he had been guilty of cruelty, but he admitted that he had administered corporal punishment when he was intoxicated.

A curious development was a claim set up by a woman from Versailles that the Marechal child, the cause of the attempted assault on Mrs. Sargent, was hers. Pending a solution of this question the court ordered that the child be kept in the Municipal Orphanage.

Sargent and his wife were arrested at Asnieres last February, charged with the gross ill-treatment of four children whom they had adopted. The couple have been in the habit of inserting advertisements in English and Belgian papers, offering to adopt children for a money consideration. An effort was made to have Mrs. Sargent examined as to her sanity, but after an investigation by a magistrate both of the Sargents were ordered to stand trial before the Correctional Court.

SEMBRICH TOO ILL TO SING.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 24.—Mme. Marcella Sembrich is suffering from such an acute attack of nervous prostration brought on by hard work that she has been compelled to cancel all her engagements for the immediate future, including the cycle of performances in which she intended to make her farewell appearances on the Berlin operatic stage. These performances had been scheduled for the first fortnight in June.

CELEBRATE EMPIRE DAY.

Children Salute British Flag on Queen Victoria's Birthday.

LONDON, May 24.—Empire Day, which comes on the anniversary of the birth of the late Queen Victoria, was more generally observed to-day than it has been since its inauguration. The day has been selected as the occasion upon which the children of the empire shall honor the flag, and it was celebrated in every part of Greater Britain. It is estimated, that all told, not less than 15,000,000 saluted the national emblem, and in the United Kingdom alone close to 4,000,000 children took part in the demonstration.

For the first time London had an organized celebration. Five thousand uniformed schoolboys marched through the main streets of the capital to Hyde Park. Here all the children gathered and saluted the national flag as well as the emblems of fifty-six dominions and colonies.

KING EDWARD HOLDS LEVEE.

LONDON, May 24.—King Edward, supported by the Prince of Wales, held a levee at St. James's Palace to-day. Ambassador Reid and J. R. Carter, Secretary of the American Embassy, were among the diplomats present.

The former presented Charles Carroll of Maryland and Walter Farwell of Chicago to his Majesty.

GIRL STUDENTS GIVE A MAY DAY PAGEANT

Senior Class of Teachers' School Reproduces Scenes from Old English Fetes.

ANCIENT SPORTS A FEATURE

Robin Hood and His Merry Men, Morrice Dancers and Village Maidens Among Those in the Pageant.

In this much-pageanted town it remained for school pupils to present the most elaborate, and in some ways the most remarkable, of the series yesterday afternoon in ten "Old English May Games" given by the 180 "scollers" in the senior class of the New York Training School for Teachers. For years it has been the custom for the graduating class to give some sort of "party" for the younger pupils, and this time, abandoning the regulation forms of school entertainment, "ye scollers of ye C Class" spent hours and hours delving in old source-books and costume-plate collections, till finally, with a little aid from the Faculty of the English Department, they evolved this realistic presentation of old English May Day games. All known forms of the ancient sports were included in a three-hour programme.

After all their labor fortune frowned upon C Class, for on Friday, the day first set for the pageant, it began to rain precisely at the moment, when the heralds should have announced the performance. As the large outdoor court in West 119th Street was to have been the village green, there was nothing for all the milkmaids, flower girls, chimney sweeps, and morrice dancers to do but remove their costumes and wait for fair weather. That was almost fatal in some cases, for the very eccentric costumes had to be sewed together on the wearer, and were not made so that they could be taken off again.

But along toward 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, seeing a reasonably blue sky overhead, the janitor hung the canvas sheeting along the street, to shut off the city asphalt from the Elizabethan atmosphere, while the boys began to erect the throne whereon the Lord and Ladie of the May were to sit. Certain unlearned folk have called it "Queen of the May," but, according to the best authorities, she is only "Ye Ladie." Around the throne were planted standards decorated with large pink and white rosettes, evidently symbolic of Spring apply blossoms. At the appointed hour the villagers, of course girls of C class, who were in straw sun bonnets and kerchiefs, awaited the coming of the Lord and Ladie.

That was the signal to begin the pageant procession, which promenaded several times around the courtyard headed by the heralds, two small boys borrowed from the Model School, and the Lord of Misrule, in a black and orange jester's costume. It may be here mentioned that the Lord of Misrule earned his title, for while ye Lord and Ladie of ye May merely had to sit on the platform and look pleasant, the jester joined in every antic from beginning to end, so that at the last step of the morrice dance, the jester's fine long black turned-up-at-the-toes boots were all worn to little shreds.

After the herald and Lord of Misrule came the Lord, looking very uncomfortable in a high white Elizabethan ruff, and the Ladie of the May. The Ladie was the sweetest little Princess out of Grimm's fairy book, with a long blue train and the long curly hair which all fairy princesses have always had. Her attendant ladies wore the tall "duncecap" headdresses of pre-Tudor times, with flowing vails. In the old cuts and costume plates they look hideous, but the reality is distinctly charming, and one might suggest it as the next stage of evolution in the peach basket. Fiddlers, playing old dance music, found after hours searching the libraries, were followed by flower girls, apple and orange girls carrying genuine fruit, which they distributed.

Maypole dancers, with their pole swathed in many-colored gauze streamers; the actors in costume for the Pyramus and Thisbe interlude from "Midsummer Night's Dream," came next, and then the chimney sweepers, with "Jack in the Green," Robin Hood and his stout followers, all of whom happened to be girls; the actors in the "Saynte George Plaies," milkmaids, with their cow, and the morrice dancers bringing up the rear with the hobby horse.

These faithful animals deserve a separate mention. The cow was constructed neither according to the advice of the biology department, nor yet after the rules of pure art. It was a dun-brown bovine, with expressive purple eyes. She bowed before the queen with her front legs, while her back ones kicked, and her front feet were two sizes larger than the rear. Ever and anon the hand of Master Arthur Loub could be seen below the flowers draped all over the animal, and forthwith the cow's tail proceeded to switch violently. For strength and speed the hobby horse equaled the best in his class. He had a fine, long, wavy, white cotton tail, his gait was lively, if it could not be analyzed as either trot or gallop.

The performance proper began with the Maypole "dance," done by twenty girls, singing "Sally In Our Alley," while one of them made Sally into a solo dance. The "Rusticks," with a real live watchman's bulldog, gave the "tragic interlude" of Pyramus and Thisbe, to the great delight not only of the intended audience, but also to that of the hundreds who, by this time, had gathered in and on the buildings opposite, filling the windows, thronging the fire-escapes, and even mounting by hundreds to the housetops.

The chimney sweepers, armed with shovels and brushes, in fantastic costumes came forward to play their game, escorting "Jack-in-the-Green." Jack looked like an eight-foot pyramid of green, covered with branches, symbolizing, it is supposed, the chimney. Their "game" was nothing but horse-play, no doubt admirably true to life, but not particularly aesthetic. Their antics, though, were done to the tune of a lugubrious chant, expressing their hope "to live in righteousness, or else to die in sin," at the end of which Jack-in-the-Green became suddenly active and chased the chimney-sweeps off.

The Robyn Hoode play took the incident of Lytel John's contest with Robyn and his adoption by the band. It was admirably Elizabethan in scenery. Three soap-boxes, connected by stout planks, were "The Bridge" and "The Streame," while the Lord of Misrule donned a label proclaiming him "the Sapling." Robyn Hood cut a cudgel from the sapling, mounted to the bridge, fought with Lytel John, and fell into the stream, whereat Robyn's beautiful pale blue beaver slouch hat rolled off and his golden hair tumbled down nearly to his sword belt, thereby disturbing somewhat his manly appearance.

After this all of Robyn's band indulged in a shooting contest, seizing their longbows and snatching up their quivers full of arrows. There was a scattering of the spectators anywhere within twenty feet of the target the moment Will Scarlett, who had lovely brown Fauntleroy ringlets, touched his trusty arrow to the bowstring.

The old Suttersworth and Oxfordshire Saint George plays were rolled into one grand miracle. Saynte George, under the eye of King Alfred and his Queen, fought the Giant Blunderbore, the Turkish Champion, and the Dragon with such dire effect that soon all concerned bit the dust. Old Dr. Ball came forward and revived the virtuous with a lump of loaf sugar apiece, thus showing the ancient origin of the "happy ending," while the dragon was borne off writhing, his tail between his legs.

"Mylkmaide dauncers" in festooned blue skirts and black bodices did a charming figure around the cow, while Betty, the solo dancer, trimmed her with buttercups. To this attention the unimpressionable bossy merely waved her tail.

The Morrice Dauncers in the Revesby sword play completed the pageant. For a thoroughly strenuous contribution, that of the Morrice Dauncers certainly took the prize. All of them, the Fool, the Pickle Herring, Blue Breeches, and the rest, came in using some eccentric step, each gyration being more violent than the one preceding. In the prologue the Fool begs the audience boldly for "A little out of your purse, Sirs,

Which we hope will never be worse,
Sirs."

After this he executed a most astonishing aerobatic dance. The play dealt with the wooing of Cicily, a six-foot damsel, impersonated by Oscar Masep, who was finally won by the Fool. The whole was capped with more fantastic gesturing and dancing, in which the hobby horse, the worm, and the dragon took part.

CALLS NURSE BLACKMAILER.

Francis Swears Miss Norton and Count de Serderini Drugged His Uncle.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—Claude de la Roche Francis made startling charges of conspiracy and attempt at blackmail to-day at a further hearing before Register Irwin, of the contest of the will of his uncle, the Marquis Percy de la Roche. The Marquis was for many years household Chamberlain to Pope Leo XIII.

A codicil to the will of the Marquis, who died in Rome, cut Mr. Francis out of an annuity of $300, and it is this codicil which Mr. Francis to-day testified was executed just before his uncle died. It was written, he declared, after his uncle had been drugged with caffeine and nitroglycerine and while he was under the influence of the stronger minds of Miss Eleanor C. Norton, a trained nurse, and Count de Sarderini, a prominent member of the Papal household. The Count, Miss Norton, and Charles M. Wood, since deceased, formerly American Vice Consul at Rome, Mr. Francis charged, had procured the execution of the codicil by conspiracy.

Mr. Francis testified that after his uncle's death, Miss Norton called upon him in Rome and asked him whether he intended to contest the codicil.

"I replied," Mr. Francis testified, "that I had already cabled to Russell Duane, at Philadelphia to file a caveat against the will.

"Thereupon Miss Norton became very angry. 'Does that mean that you will not compromise?' she asked. I replied that there was nothing to compromise.

"Miss Norton then said: 'That codicil shall go through, and I will spare no effort to get it through. You have behaved outrageously, and I will not hesitate to say anything to blacken your character.'"

With this Mr. Francis continued: "I sprang to my feet. 'Miss Norton,' I said, 'this is blackmail, and I must ask you to leave my room.' I believe she is now sorry for her threats."

LOST IN A RACE WITH DEATH.

Chauffeur Got His Wife to the Hospital, but It Was Too Late.

Mrs. Esther Peterson died in the receiving room at Bellevue Hospital yesterday of heart disease, after her husband, a chauffeur, had raced against death with her in his employer's automobile from Second Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street to the hospital gates.

Mrs. Peterson had been ill for some time, and on the advice of her physician, her husband, who is employed by a broker, started with her from their home at 201 East Sixty-sixth Street, for Bellevue. A woman friend of the family accompanied them, and the automobile was sent along slowly until Thirty-fourth Street and Second Avenue was reached.

There Mrs. Peterson fell back heavily against her friend. She called to Mr. Peterson, who was driving the automobile, to hurry. Peterson put on all possible speed and sped down Second Avenue, regardless of the speed laws. He was warned at nearly every crossing and stopped once by a mounted policeman. The husband simply made a gesture toward the rear of the automobile, where his dying wife lay in the arms of her friend. The mounted policeman nodded his head for Peterson to go ahead.

He sped on, and his wife was still alive when she was lifted out of the automobile into a wheelchair at the entrance to the hospital. The chair was pushed into the receiving room and Dr. Volkenheim, the admitting surgeon, bent over Mrs. Peterson to examine her. As he did so she expired. Her disease was dilation of the heart.

CONNERS PROMISED $200,000 FOR STOCK

But Put Off Paying Till the Telephone Companies Raised the Money Elsewhere.

NOT A POLITICAL GIFT

Tribute to Personal Worth, Says State Committeeman Finucane—High Finance Methods Unraveled.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 24.—Counsel in the action brought by Charles M. Lane to recover $4,000 alleged investment losses from the Directors of the United States Independent Telephone Company, stipulated to-day that the testimony given last week in the preliminary examination should stand in the case, brought against the same defendants by Julia Diefendorf of Brooklyn.

It disclosed a story of high finance, involving the formation of two telephone companies, each capitalized at $50,000,000, the principal assets of which were a Chicago manufacturing plant capitalized at $50,000 and a burglar alarm franchise in the City of New York, valued at $5,000. Of the seven defendants, two are Presidents of banks in this city, one is the Democratic State Committeeman from Monroe County, and the other four are prominent financiers of Rochester.

The examination failed to show, however, what became of several million dollars in cash, which had been subscribed for the stock and bonds of the two companies. The testimony did reveal that large blocks of the stocks were given away to various persons interested in the deal. One of these was W. J. Conners of Buffalo, who got $2,000,000 worth of stock without paying a cent.

The depositions of the seven defendants, Eugene Satterlee, bank President; A. O. Fenn, bank President; Thomas W. Finucane, Hiram W. Sibley, George Eastman, James S. Watson, and Henry A. Strong show how the United States Independent Telephone Company, capitalized at $50,000,000; and the New York Independent Telephone Company, also capitalized at $50,000,000, with the Stromberg-Carlson Company, the Utah, and other subsidiary companies all sprang in 1902 from the Chicago Stromberg-Carlson Company, which was capitalized at only $50,000.

The New York Stromberg-Carlson Company assigned $3,000,000 in stock to Satterlee and Finucane in return for the Chicago concern, for which they had paid one million and a half. It also borrowed $300,000 from Rochester banks and then declared a 30 per cent. dividend. Directly thereafter it increased its capital stock by $1,500,000, out of which it paid back the loan.

Another loan preceded another dividend and a further increase of $1,500,000 in the capital stock. It was also shown that the Utah Company, while unable to pay the interest on its bonds, declared a dividend unknown to the majority stockholder, the Stromberg-Carlson Company.

Thomas W. Finucane, the Democratic State Committeeman, was examined again this morning by Counsel Adams for the plaintiff about the $2,000,000 in bonus stock given to W. J. Conners of Buffalo, the Democratic State Chairman.

Q.—Dir Mr. Conners subscribe any money? A.—Not actually; he agreed to.

Q.—Why did you instruct Mr. Fenn to give Conners $2,000,000 in bonus stock? A.—Mr. Conners is an important and influential man, owning two newspapers in Buffalo, and a man of wealth and power in the financial world. He agreed to furnish $200,000 in cash, but his payment was postponed from time to time. Finally it became unnecessary for him to give it, because we had already raised the amount necessary.

Q.—Then Conners got this $2,000,000 of bonus stock without putting up the money? A.—Yes, he did.

Q.—And he kept the stock? A.—Yes, he did.

Q.—Was it not because of his political power in New York State and City that he got the stock? A.—No, Sir; it was because of the general, all-around good standing of the man.

There was an agreement, Mr. Finucane said, to refund money to the original syndicate members, but Conners had not signed this agreement. In respect to the two-million bonus stock, the agreement was between Conners and Finucane. He did not know where the agreement was.

John G. Milburn of New York has been retained by some of the defendants to look after their interests at the trial of the action.

SECOND POISON VICTIM DEAD.

Robert Tarry Succumbs to Effects of Eating Caustic Soda-Made Biscuits.

Robert Tarry of Tottenville, S. I., whose wife died on Sunday as a result, it is believed, of eating some biscuits into which she had put caustic soda instead of baking soda, died yesterday afternoon in his home without having regained consciousness since his collapse on Sunday night.

Coroner's Physician Mord performed an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Tarry yesterday and decided that the woman had died of poisoning. He did not determine what kind of poison had caused her death, but sent the stomach to a Manhattan laboratory for examination. What was left of the eggs, biscuits, and coffee which the aged couple had for breakfast on Sunday were sent also for examination.

BURNED OLD LETTERS; TRIED TO DIE BY GAS

Landlady of Girl Vocal Student Had Heard Her Speak of an Old Love Affair.

GIRL HAD SCHOOL MEDAL

Miss Flora Shaefer Came Here from Cincinnati a Year Ago—Goes to Hospital Unconscious.

Mrs. Rubil Gardner, who occupies an apartment on the third floor of the apartment house, at 542 West 145th Street, smelled gas when she returned to her home from a walk yesterday afternoon, and presently found that it came from a room occupied by Miss Flora Eugenia Shaefer, a young music student who came here from her home in Cincinnati about a year ago to continue her musical education.

Mrs. Gardner recalled that, before leaving the house, she had seen Miss Shaefer engaged in burning some old letters and papers, and also of having heard her speak at times of an old love affair and a sweetheart, from whom she had parted, but who had never married.

Convinced that in a moment of melancholy the girl had sought to kill herself, Mrs. Gardner summoned Valentine Frederick, the colored elevator and hall boy. He mounted a chair, and, looking over the transom into Miss Shaefer's room, saw the young woman lying unconscious upon her bed, with one end of a tube which was attached to the gas jet clutched between her teeth.

Frederick got Policemen Washburn and Coghlan of the West 152d Street Station. They broke down the door. While they waited for an ambulance from Washington Heights Hospital the policemen worked over the girl trying to restore her to consciousness. They were unsuccessful. Dr. Cohen on his arrival with the ambulance had no better fortune. He was compelled to hurry the girl to the hospital, insensible.

From Mrs. Gardner it was learned that Miss Shaefer had a voice of unusual merit and that she was in demand as a singer in several choirs in the upper part of the city. She had been in poor health, however, and had not accepted any of her offers. Miss Shaefer won the [illegible] scholarship medal in 1893, and was the recipient of a gold watch offered in a contest by a Cincinnati newspaper.

Mrs. Gardner said that Miss Shaefer complained of a headache yesterday, and when Mrs. Gardner left the house the young woman told her to leave her alone for a while. The fact that Miss Shaefer burned a packet of letters yesterday morning is considered significant by the police. That she was not pressed for money is vouched for by Mrs. Gardner, who told the police that the young woman received a weekly draft from Cincinnati.

NEWS AGENTS FIGHT FOR THEIR RIGHTS

Five Hundred to March on the City Hall and Appeal Against the Centadrink Company.

LEGAL POINT IS INVOLVED

License Granted to the Fountain Concern for Elevated Booths an Infringement, They Say.

Newsdealers numbering 500 or more, all of whom have stands under the stairways of elevated railway stations throughout the city, will visit City Hall on Friday to protest to the Mayor and Board of Estimate against being ousted from their time-honored locations by the New York Centadrink Company, which recently obtained a license giving it the privilege of installing fountains under the elevated stairs to dispense carbonated water at 1 cent a glass. A public hearing for the newsdealers has been granted by the Mayor and Board of Estimate in response to vigorous appeals.

The newsdealers will be accompanied by several hundred friends and sympathizers. Several civic bodies are expected to join in the protest against ousting the vendors of newspapers and magazines, and the plea will be made that the public will be put to inconvenience in the event of the newsstands being driven from the elevated stairways and the fountains installed.

A resolution petitioning the Mayor and Board of Estimate to revoke the license of the Centadrink Company has been adopted by the news vendors, and will be presented at the hearing on Friday. Several speakers will argue the cause of the news vendors and will lay some stress on the fact that a large number of the men who now have newsstands under the elevated stairways are aged and infirm, many of them cripples, who, without that means of livelihood, would be in a bad way. Here is the resolution:

> Whereas, As the Board of Estimate has granted a ten-year license, with privilege of renewal, to the New York Centadrink Company to sell drinking water at 1 cent a glass under the elevated stairs in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn Boroughs, and, whereas, said spaces were limited by act of Legislature, within which booths or stands may be placed for the sale of newspapers and periodicals only, and, whereas, said drinking fountains are not necessary to public convenience, and if erected would incumber and obstruct the public thoroughfares; therefore be it
>
> Resolved, That we, the undersigned citizens and residents of said boroughs, hereby petition his Honor the Mayor and the Honorable Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York for the immediate revocation of the privilege granted to the New York Centadrink Company.

The situation which confronts the newsdealers was explained yesterday by M. E. Golde, President of the New York Newsdealers' Association.

"Apart from the question of public policy involved, it would seem that this specific grant is illegal, being in distinct conflict with the law in question," he said. "But such is the pernicious power of petty politics to circumvent and frustrate the law. In view of the evident fact that small politicians are behind this project, those who are directly affected by the grant—the news vendors themselves—should not fail to contest every inch of ground in conservation of their rights and privileges.

"Moreover, when it is considered that many of the men engaged in this line are crippled and infirm, it can be readily seen what a hardship would result by their being deprived of this, their sole means of livelihood.

"It is true that the contract between the city and the Centadrink Company reads that the fountains shall be installed in such a manner as not to interfere with any other person or persons occupying space under permits from the Aldermen. Yet it may be assumed that there cannot be space enough under the stairs of the elevated, outside of that already allotted by law for the erection of news booths, in which to put the water fountains. During the Winter months, as is stipulated in the proposed contract, these fountains would be boxed up, while the newsstands are open the year around for sixteen hours a day for public accommodation. Which, then, would be of greater service to the public? For the public, after all, is the determining factor.

"If any doubt remains as to the Centadrink Company and its backers being inimically disposed to the news vendor, it is enough to cite this paragraph from the company's letter to the Board of Estimate, under date of March 3:

"'A comparison with the ten-dollar annual fee received by the city for the newsstands under the elevated stations and the compensation we offer for the same privilege demonstrates the fairness of our proposition to the city.'

"If the matter resolves itself into a business proposal solely, I am in a position to say authoritatively that the newsdealers under the elevated stations would be disposed to pay to the city a sum equal to, if not greater, than that offered by the Centadrink Water Company—$3 a month—for the same privileges, provided a guarantee can be given to them such as has been given to the Centadrink Company."

SETBACK FOR ORATORS.

Dr. Maxwell Wants Few Visitors' Speeches at School Graduations.

Dr. William H. Maxwell, City Superintendent of Schools, has placed a ban on elaborate graduation exercises in the public schools.

For several years Dr. Maxwell has urged the Principals to make the exercises as simple as possible, omitting all attempts at display. Some of the Principals fell in with the idea, but others did not. Hence, Dr. Maxwell has sent a letter to all the Principals outlining his ideas and asking the Principals to avoid taxing exercises, long programmes with many invited guests, and numerous speeches by visitors.

He favors specimen work by classes, dramatizations, music, and one or two short speeches. The use of outside halls or the assembly rooms of other schools is discouraged by the Superintendent. Some Principals have taken the ground that more or less elaborate programmes have the effect of interesting the parents in the work of the schools.

BENCH ATTACK ON THE MAYOR

Magistrate Crane Calls Him "That Little Man" and Wishes He Were Real

City Magistrate Leroy B. Crane, who is sitting in the West Side Police Court, was quoetd in some of the evening newspapers yesterday as having spoken of Mayor McClellan as "that little duck in the Mayor's chair," and as wishing that "we had a real Mayor in the City Hall, who had some backbone." Mr. Crane is not an appointee of the present Mayor.

The Magistrate's remarks were made in discussing a summons on which Lieut. Robert Quinn and Detective James Larkin of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station were called to court at the instance of Emil Fuchs, attorney for the Sharkey Athletic Club at Columbus Avenue and Sixty-fifth Street. Fuchs alleged that on May 14, when Lieut. Quinn was Acting Captain of the precinct, he and Larkin went to the club, broke open a door, and smashed furniture. It was a night of the bouts at the club, and those were postponed.

Magistrate Crane told a TIMES reporter last night that these were the remarks he made from the bench:

"These clubs are fake clubs and are only kept open by political pull and practically run by politicians. They all ought to be turned down. If we had a real Mayor in the City Hall, who had some brain and backbone instead of that little man now in the chair, these clubs could not exist. The politicians have a grip on everything.

"The Catskill water scheme is another barefaced scheme. It is the most crooked and outrageous thing that was ever attempted, in my opinion.

"If we had a good-sized Mayor in this city with a little backbone in him, with sufficient character, brain force, and fight enough to shut out politicians we would not have these defiant citizens who, when they are held here, stick their fingers to their noses at the Magistrate and boast that the case will be 'thrown out downtown,' as it invariably is.

"The police cannot do everything. They are not supported. Theodore Bingham is the best Police Commissioner the city has ever had. His hands have been tied down by politicians, but he is honest, and he is just beginning to see light through the cobwebs of the Police Department.

"We can expect to see good police work while Commissioner Bingham remains in office. The next Mayor will not dare to turn him out. He is too honest and square. There has been nobody to do anything but him, and with the same working material he has accomplished more than any other Police Commissioner.

"In nine months more the sway of the politicians will be over, and I hope to God the next Mayor will have enough backbone and moral courage to stop this outrageous crookedness."

AUTO RIDE FOR CRIPPLES.

Owners of Twenty-Five Cars Lend Them to Give Youngsters an Outing.

For the fourth consecutive year the crippled children from the Free Industrial School in West Fifty-seventh Street had their annual automobile outing yesterday. Mrs. Arthur Elliott Fish, under whose patronage the outing is given, was unable to be with them owing to illness. Following the custom of former years, the children were conveyed to their destination in Stearns cars, twenty-five owners of these machines donating their cars and drivers for their entertainment.

The cars were lined up in West Fityseventh Street in front of the school, and provided ample room for the fifty-five children and their teachers. Commissioner Bingham detailed Sergt. Casey at the head of a squad of bicycle policemen to lead the procession. A stop was made at the Crescent Athletic Club in Bay Ridge for luncheon. The trip was then continued to Luna Park, where the children were the guests of Frederic Thompson. They witnessed all the new shows, rode the elephants, and had a thoroughly good time.

APPROVE SCHOOL BUDGET.

Aldermen's Committee Favors $105,000 Appropriation.

The Aldermen's Finance Committee met yesterday at the City Hall and decided to report favorably a $105,000 appropriation asked by the Board of Education for vacation and vocation schools. Of this sum $55,000 will be devoted to the former purpose and $50,000 to the latter.

The city has appropriated $175,000 already for vacation schools.

In approving the request for the additional $55,000 the committee will report that it has learned that on the west side, between Twenty-eighth and Fifty-fourth Streets, there are no public playgrounds. The danger to the children playing in the streets along the Eleventh Avenue tracks is also emphasized. The money will be used for the opening of the yards and the basements of the schools in this district for use as playgrounds during certain hours in the afternoon and on Saturdays.

The $50,000 will be used to establish two industrial and domestic training schools for girls. They will be opened some time in the Fall if the appropriation is approved. The classes will be conducted by a force of seventy-five teachers on afternoons and Saturdays.

Metz Would Save Dredging Waste.

Controller Metz has written to Park Commissioner Kennedy of Brooklyn and Dock Commissioner Spooner, urging them to co-operate on some plan to use the material being dredged in South Brooklyn in filling in the Shore Road at Bay Ridge. The Controller says that 2,300,000 cubic yards of the total 4,200,000 which are to be taken out at South Brooklyn have already been carried out to sea and dumped. He estimates that if the rest of the material can be used on the Shore Road the city will save nearly $1,000,000.

"Red" Duffy Ready to Go to Sing Sing.

On Wednesday he will begin serving a term of not less than three years and six months nor more than four years and six months in Sing Sing.

SLEUTHS MUST STOP NAGGING MRS. YERKES

Lawyers Appeal Against Annoying Espionage of the Receiver's Detectives.

AFRAID TO LEAVE HER ROOM

Fifth Avenue House Has Been Practically a Prison, According to Her Counsel.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals decided yesterday to continue the receivership of Harrington Putnam for the estate of the late Charles T. Yerkes in this jurisdiction pending the decision on the appeal from the original order, which is set down for argument on June 15. At the same time the court yields a point to Mrs. Yerkes in ordering that she be allowed to come and go at the Fifth Avenue home of the dead financier without hindrance by the detectives which the receiver has placed there.

On the argument yesterday James Russell Soley, counsel for Mrs. Yerkes, repeated the charges in substance which were made by him on the original attempt to get the receiver's guards withdrawn, that the privacy of Mrs. Yerkes's residence was being invaded and she herself subjected to indignity.

"One of my clerks went up there the other day," he said, "and found a guard putting on a pair of sneakers. He asked the guard why he did this, and he replied that he didn't want to be heard when he moved around.

"Mrs. Yerkes has recovered from her late illness, but she has been afraid to leave her home up to this time for fear that the guards should prevent her from entering on her return. Why, only a few days ago some of the servants started to roll up some valuable rugs to put them away for the Summer, and the guards told them to leave the rugs where they were."

Mr. Soley said that the order of the court appointing a receiver was unprecedented, and that the invasion of the house by the detectives was an outrage.

"They have invaded a house occupied by a lady," he declared, "and have been camping there since April 5. She has absolutely no privacy. We ask that this receivership be stayed and that the invasion be brought to an end. If you can't give us this relief, then give a lady whose privacy has been invaded by an order of the court such protection as you can."

William P. Hornblower, also on behalf of Mrs. Yerkes, said that there had been no precedent for the action of the court in 120 years of judicial decisions. For the receiver, Joseph Cotton, Jr., said that the receiver was under a heavy bond to keep intact the entire property, and that he could not discharge this obligation unless he has full possession of the house.

Judge Adams announced the decision of the court after a short consultation. Mr. Soley filed with his briefs an affidavit made by a clerk in his office in which it was said that the only way Mrs. Yerkes had of maintaining her privacy during the espionage of the detectives was by remaining in her sleeping apartment.

SLID THROUGH ZONE OF FIRE.

How Firemen Rescued Watchman Who Couldn't Speak English.

Fifteen minutes of flame burned out the second floor of the five-story brick building 251 and 253 Canal Street last night and caused a loss of about $2,000 to the Empire Postcard and Novelty Company. The Favorite Skirt Company, which occupies the upper floors of the building, had a slight damage from smoke, and water damaged the Minetta Café on the ground floor to a small extent.

There was only one man in the building above the first floor when the fire started, and the manner of his escape excited a crowd of about 2,000. He appeared on the fourth-floor fire-escape landing after the fire was well started, and stood there shouting for help. By that time flames were shooting out from the second-floor windows and smoke was pouring through the upper floors. To get to the street it was necessary to go through the flames at the second-floor landing.

The man was clad very lightly. Two firemen went up and wrapped him in a coat, and by a quick slide through the flame zone on the second floor they got him to the ground.

At the Elizabeth Street Station the rescued man said he was Solomon Bernstein, watchman for the Favorite Skirt Company. He couldn't speak English and didn't know his address.

PLUCKY RESCUES AT A FIRE.

Firemen Overcome by Gas in a Cellar Dragged Out by Others.

Several firemen were overcome last night in a fire in the cellar of the five-story tenement house at 332 East Sixty-first Street, and some of them gave a fine display of pluck in rescuing others who had been made helpless.

Lieut. Kratochevil of Engine 2, but assigned last night to Engine 39, in East Sixty-seventh Street, the Fire Headquarters, was taken to Flower Hospital suffering from gas poisoning. Fireman Nygray of Truck 16, was another sufferer, but went back to quarters.

The house is occupied by many Italian families. The blaze started in some bedding in the cellar. The damage was only $500. There was the usual quick exodus of the tenants.

Kratochevil sent Truckmen Monahan, Illium, Peterson, and others down into the cellar. The heat had parted a gas pipe, and there was a deadly mixture of gas and smoke. Kratochevil finally told his men to get out, and, himself the last to do so, fell unconscious. When his men reached the sidewalk and found him missing Monahan and Illium went back. They dragged him out, and then Truck 16 had its turn. They went down into the cellar, and Parker, Murphy, and Nygry were overcome, but were soon rescued.

J. COLEMAN DRAYTON SUES.

Action Against Franco-American Ferment Co. to Acquire 205 Shares.

In an effort to gain control of the $100,000 Franco-American Ferment Company, J. Coleman Drayton is suing that corporation for the possession of 205 of its 1,000 shares of capital stock, the par value of each of which is $100. Mr. Drayton, through his lawyers, obtained a temporary injunction last Friday restraining the company from using the particular 205 shares for which he is suing. The question of the ownership of the shares will be argued next Thursday in Special Term, Part I., of the Supreme Court.

The company was organized by Drayton, Hiram Schwarz, its present President; Wilbur M. Bates, its Secretary; Franklin Riker, and others in February, 1908, for the purpose of manufacturing sour milk products by the Emil Metchnikoff process. Charles E. Kelley, Mr. Drayton's lawyer, said yesterday that the 205 shares of stock in dispute were originally in Mr. Drayton's possession. According to Lawyer Kelley, Mr. Drayton some time ago left the certificates in the company's offices to be transferred on the books. According to the lawyer, Drayton has not had possession of them since. Mr. Drayton, according to his lawyer, already owns 225 shares of the company's stock, and controls 105 more.

Lawyer Kelley would not discuss his client's purpose in trying to acquire control of the company, but said that it might ultimately be in a measure "philanthropic." President Schwarz of the company referred inquirers to the company's lawyer, Franklin Bien, who is out of town.

MRS. CHALLENGER GOES FREE.

She Says Her Seizure of the Tracy Furniture Was Just a Joke.

Judge Holt in the United States District Court denied yesterday, with the agreement of both sides, the motion made by counsel for Receiver L. G. Benedict of the bankrupt Stock Exchange firm of Tracy & Co. to punish for contempt Mrs. Margaret Challenger, who on Tuesday of last week, with the aid of a gang of movers from a storage warehouse company, took all the furniture out of the Thirty-third Street offices of the concern. Mrs. Challenger agreed to have the furniture returned.

There was a considerable company in the court room when Mrs. Challenger was called to answer to the order to show cause why contempt proceedings should not be taken. She advanced to the bench and began talking to Judge Holt in a low voice.

"It was all a joke," she said. "We didn't intend to do anything wrong. I'm not represented by counsel because I thought that I could explain it all, but I think that I'd like to have an adjournment if your Honor doesn't mind, for I am really getting very nervous."

Judge Holt asked how long an adjournment Mrs. Challenger would like to have, and she suggested three weeks as a convenient time. At this point Ralph Wolf, counsel for Receiver Benedict, said that if Mrs. Challenger would return the furniture he would not press the contempt proceedings. She agreed to this, and Judge Holt dismissed the motion, apparently to the satisfaction of every one concerned.

under its present name and policy, has been in existence since October, 1908.

Its growth is the most phenomenal in the history of magazine publishing.

There are more than twenty reasons why June HAMPTON'S is in such great demand. The chief reason—

Maybe Mathews' article on the Water Power Trust.

Maybe Russell's article on the wonderful Watermelon Patch of James J. Hill and his associates.

Maybe Dickson's article on the Unknowable Negro.

Maybe Kauffman's article on finishing schools and "Our Undisciplined Daughters."

Maybe Gilbert K. Chesterton's sparkling essay on "The American Multimillionaire."

Maybe HAMPTON'S wonderful assortment of fiction; the great serial story by Rex Beach; the phenomenally clever detective story by Edwin Balmer and William MacHarg; stories by Charles G. D. Roberts, Parker H. Filmore and others.

Maybe when you see the Billiken cover you'll want to "Grin and Begin to Win."

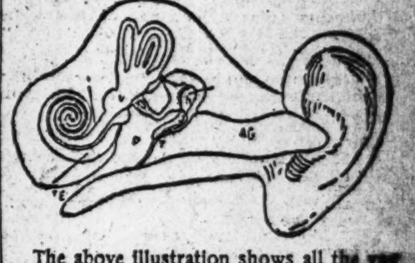
WHAT MADE YOU DEAF?

[Copyright, 1909, by L. F. Ellison.]

Did you ever stop to think what made you deaf? I suppose you thought it was catarrh and that it could not have been avoided. Do you know that wild animals and domestic animals seldom become deaf except when they become very old, and that even then deafness is rare among them? It took me thirty years to satisfy myself what the real cause of deafness in man was. I am going to try to explain the matter to you.



The above illustration shows all the various parts of the ear. AG—The canal leading to the ear drum. T—The ear drum. H—The bones of the ear. P—The middle ear. V—The internal ear. TE—The Eustachian tube, leading from the ear to the throat.

Back of the ear drum there is a tube that leads down into the upper part of the throat. This tube has an important duty to perform. It conveys air into the middle ear, by the means of which the ear drum can vibrate when sound waves strike it. At any period in your life when you have a sore throat from any cause, whether it be from an ordinary cold, grippe, tonsilitis, measles, diphtheria, or scarlet fever, there is a great collection of germs in the throat, and when you take a pocket handkerchief to free your nose you invariably hold both nostrils. When you blow your nose the air is compressed in the upper and back part of the throat, and when the compressed air rushes up into the ear it carries along with it the germs that have set up inflammation in your throat. These germs go to work and inflame the tube that leads to the ear and close it up, or else they lodge in the middle ear, where they set up inflammation that shows itself in ear noises, loss of hearing, earache, discharging ear, and even mastoiditis.

The pocket handkerchief held firmly to the nostrils while blowing the nose is really the cause of nine cases of deafness out of every ten. Deafness in children is caused by mothers holding the handkerchief to the child's nose and telling it to blow hard. If, when you blow your nose, you would only hold one nostril at a time there would be little danger of deafness. The great cause of deafness is the improper use of pocket handkerchiefs, for deafness almost always starts as trouble in the throat, which is forced up into the ear by blowing the nose. If there were no pocket handkerchiefs there would be little deafness. The lower animals do not and cannot hold their nostrils when they blow them, and luckily the animals cannot use pocket handkerchiefs; consequently they rarely get deaf.

I have told you the cause of deafness, I will now tell you the remedy. Stop blowing your nose hard by closing both nostrils. If you have already blown disease up into your ear, we are prepared to offer you something which will restore the hearing to many ears that have refused to yield to treatment. In order to introduce this new feature in dealing with ear troubles, we make you the following announcement: The BAKER MICROPHONE COMPANY places at your service a trained aurist of thirty years' experience, who will give you a free demonstration of our method of dealing with head noises and deafness.

After cutting, probing, and blowing air into the ears had failed to restore lost hearing, finally Science has shown the proper way to deal with deafness. The Baker Microphone is a little instrument that takes up the duties of the normal ear, and by doing the work for the ailing ear it rests the disordered parts and often allows them to regain their tone. The Baker Microphone does for the failing ears what proper lenses do for failing eyes. You can test this little device without cost. The majority of ear sufferers now have an opportunity to be relieved of their disability. The Baker Microphone restores a weak ear to a condition where it can be made a useful working member.

It is the smallest practical magnifying telephone ever produced. It is the best instrument devised to assist the hearing. THERE IS A REASON FOR THIS. If you will come to our offices we will show you the reason.

FROM ONE OF THE BEST KNOWN LADIES OF BROOKLYN.

Baker Microphone Co.:

Gentlemen:

I shall be very glad to give you an account of my experience with the Microphone if by that means I can give relief to any one afflicted as I was.

I began losing my hearing years ago and had become so deaf that I could not hear general conversation, much less a lecture or a person reading aloud. The noises in the head were especially distressing in my case, as I am a music lover, and they were pitched in different and discordant keys. Since using the Microphone they have almost entirely disappeared. This alone makes the little instrument valuable to me. It has also helped my general hearing, and by its aid I can hear not only the conversation when several are in the room, but a lecture and reading aloud.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) Mrs. A. M. Sturtevant, 485A [illegible] St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Whatever your ear trouble there is an expert aural surgeon at our office whose services are free to you. He will advise you on all matters relating to the ear.

Call if you can at one of our offices and we will be pleased to demonstrate the benefits of this little instrument. If you cannot call, write for full particulars and booklet describing the Baker Microphone, and how you may test it in your own home free of cost to you.

ROGER BRESNAHAN HONORED BY "FANS"

Old Giant Catcher Receives Loving Cup, Resolutions, and Flowers.

THEN HIS CARDINALS WIN

Giants Get Men on Bases, but Cannot Bat Them Home—Doyle and Devlin Make Errors That Cost 3 Runs.

Having noted quickly in passing that the St. Louis Cardinals took the game yesterday afternoon from the Giants by the score of 3 to 1, through lax pitching by Mathewson and a bankrupting fumble by Doyle at a critical moment, one hurries on to tell about the reception given to Roger Bresnahan, one-time Giant, now come back as combined manager and catcher of the St. Louis team.

Along about 4 o'clock a horseshoe of flowers came advancing across the field from the big gate, back of which was seen, after awhile, a small boy, the motive force. Then two men brought in a gigantic cup made of flowers. Others brought in ladders, settees, Joe Humphreys, and other necessities of a baseball presentation. They were all grouped around the home plate.

Mr. Humphreys, the famous inaudible open-air orator, removed his hat and began. Among his words and phrases caught on the fly as he turned around were these:

"Idol for five years. All love him. Token of appreciation. With us again. Sorry he's against us. John M. Ward, old Giant manager, will present cup."

On one side of the largest part of the cup was a picture of Bresnahan; on the other were these words: "To our pal, Roger Bresnahan, from his New York admirers, Polo Grounds, May 24, 1909." On top of the cap of the cup was a ball upheld by bats. In addition to this, Roger received a set of resolutions beautifully engrossed and tied with a ribbon of green silk, together with the key to the village lockup. These were from eminent citizens, including Mayor McClellan. It was a notable event just before the playing of a very bad game of ball.

Matters began to look serious for the Giants in the first inning. Byrne having struck out, Shaw was given first, taking second on the passing of Bresnahan at first. Mathewson gave Konetchy first. He raced for a steal; Myers caught him at second. But Shaw, who had advanced to third on a wild pitch by Mathewson, was racing home. Doyle threw back to catch him. Myers had to get a little away from the base to reach the ball. Then he juggled with it. Shaw, however, in coming home had failed to touch the base.

"Touch him," yelled Mathewson, while Shaw stood around hitching up his trousers. This done by Myers, Umpire Johnstone waved him out, this making the third.

The Giants got their only run in the third. Doyle, the first man up, was given first. He took second and third on a fumble of McCormick's grounder by Charles, which also allowed McCormick a base. Doyle came home on Murray's long sacrifice fly to left. The next inning, with three on bases and only one out, the Giants were retired by two pop-up fouls.

In the sixth the Cardinals got their first run. With one out, Konetchy gained first on Devlin's low throw, took second on Evan's single to centre, stole third, and came home on Charles's drive to centre. Evans was stopped with a near-run at the plate on the throw in by O'Hara.

In the next inning the Cardinals took two runs. Hulswitt, first up, was given his base, took second and third on Lush's single to right. Lush took second on the passing of Byrne at first. Doyle ran to the infield to get Shaw's grounder, fumbled it, let it pass, and Hulswitt and Lush came home while the Giants were retrieving the ball. Neither Giants nor Cardinals did anything after that. The score:

Cubs Get There in Eleventh.

If the Brooklyns had given the same support to Rucker, their left-handed pitcher, as the Chicagos gave to Brown, the world's champions from Chicago would have left Washington Park, Brooklyn, a defeated team yesterday. As it was, it took the visitors eleven innings to score a victory by four runs to three, and this was due to a long hit of Hofman's to centre field in the final inning after two men were out, on which the Chicagoan made the circuit of the bases. Rucker did quite as well in the box as the three-fingered expert, even if the champions did make one more hit than the Superbas. Each gave one base on balls, but Rucker struck out seven to Brown's five, three of the latter being in succession in the tenth inning. It was in fielding that the Chicagoans excelled, not an error being charged against them, while Burch, Hummel, Alperman, and Jordan had five between them. The score:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Yankees Nosed Out of a Tight Game Played with White Sox.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—The White Sox, noted for their run-getting ability with a few hits, pulled out victory to-day from the New York Yankees by the score of 2 to 1. It was truly a pitchers' battle, with the honors nearly even. The "hitless" White Sox could find only four hits off Brockett, the Yankees' pitcher, but one was a triple and another a double. But added to these, were six bases on balls, which hurt some.

The Yankees did not have their batting clothes on, either, for all they could do with the stick was to rap out five singles. It was a beautifully fielded game, each side making only one error. The score:

No Opponent for Columbia Eight.

Columbia University will not have a chance to try out her senior eight in the Harlem Regatta on Monday. At a meeting of the Harlem Regatta Association last night at the Harlem Casino it was decided to eliminate the senior eight-oared event from the programme, as the entry of Columbia University was the only one received for the race. The junior four-oared gig event was also cut from the programme.

The list of entries announced last night shows a preponderance of crews from the vicinity of this city, but there are several entries from Philadelphia, and Baltimore and Buffalo are also represented. The total number of entries for the regatta is fifty-six.

It was decided to start the races at 9 A. M., and until 1:30 the races will be rowed up stream from Washington Bridge to Fordham Heights. From 2 o'clock until the close of the events the races will be rowed down stream, this arrangement being necessary owing to the tide.

At a meeting last night the New Rochelle Rowing Club was elected to membership in the Harlem Association.

FASHION PLATE WINS LUCKY RACE

Wide Turn by Arasee Lets Up Oneck Stable's Colt for Head Victory in Handicap.

DALMATIAN LANDS AT 10 TO 1

Post Favorites, Four at Odds on, Capture Purses at Belmont Park's First Extra Day of Racing.

Fortune was favorable to the experiment of the first extra day of racing at Belmont Park yesterday, and with fair, warm weather, an attendance of about 3,000 asembled at the big Queens course to witness the running of a programme made up of purses. The horsemen were responsible for the one shortcoming of the sport, for, though the races filled well, the owners and trainers, in doubt about the condition of the tracks, cut the fields down to mere skeletons of the original announcement of entries, only four horses running in the mile handicap, which had thirteen entries, and only five starting for the selling mile and a sixteenth, for which sixteen horses were named.

Favorites were successful in five consecutive races, four of the winners starting at odds on. There was room for doubt whether the winners were the best horses straight through, and though the favorite, Fashion Plate, captured the handicap, the result was made by the most pronounced bit of luck that backers had in the course of the day.

GOLFER TRAVERS BEATEN.

American Loses to Henderson in First Round for British Title.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

EDINBURGH, May 24.—Jerome D. Travers, the American amateur golf champion, of Montclair, N. J., has been eliminated from the British amateur championship contests that opened on the Muirfield course to-day. He lost his first match to W. A. Henderson of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club by 2 up and 1 to play.

Mr. Travers failed to play up to the form expected of him. He appeared nervous on starting, and lost the first two holes by bad tee shots. The American then lighted a cigarette, pulled himself together, and succeeded in getting square at the fifth hole. His weakness from the tee, however, reasserted itself, and he drove in the bunkers at the eighth and ninth holes and could only halve the holes which might have won for America.

The players turned all even, but Mr. Travers lost the tenth hole, foozled a drive badly in the twelfth, and again became two down. He missed by a yard a put to win the thirteenth hole, and this finally turned the game against him. Henderson only wanted the halves, which he obtained. The match went to the seventeenth hole, where the British player won by 2 up and 1 to play, and Travers was eliminated from the championship.

In the other contest Lassen beat Palmer 2 up and 1 to play.

WOOD WINS MARATHON.

Orphee and Cibot Finish Third and Fourth, Respectively, at Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 24.—Wood of Montreal won the professional Marathon race here to-day in 2:39:00. Fourteen started in the race and six finished. Billy Sherring, winner of the Olympic Marathon in 1906, quit in the nineteenth mile, complaining of severe cramps in his stomach. Hans Holmer of Halifax finished second to Wood, nearly a lap behind, while the French pair, Orphee and Cibot, who won the six days' go-as-you-please race at Madison Square Garden, finished third and fourth, respectively. Fred Meadows of Guelph, Ontario, was fifth.

POLO ATTRACTS BIG CROWD.

New Haven Vanquishes Point Judith in Van Cortlandt Park Tournament.

Before an enthusiastic crowd of more than 1,000 spectators Squadron A's polo tournament was opened yesterday afternoon on the Van Cortlandt Park polo field. The initial game was between the teams of New Haven and Point Judith for the Squadron A-Cups. The former was decidedly superior in every way, and on handicap allowance gave Point Judith five goals, and although losing one-half a goal for a foul, won the match by 14½ goals to 7.

Seven Scholastic Records Broken.

Seven scholastic records of track and field of the annual invitation meet of Commercial High School were broken at the games held yesterday afternoon at Commercial Field. Four of the new records were made by the representatives of Manual Training High School. The events in which the old figures were eclipsed were the 100-yard dash, junior and senior; the one-mile run, 220-yard dash, junior and senior; half-mile run, and the discus throw, Greek style. Two of the records were made by D. Friend of Manual Training High School and two went to the credit of C. Major of Boys' High School.

The annual event, which carries with it the championship of the Brooklyn schools, was won by the Manual Training School with a total of 63½ points. Boys' High School was second in the race for the point trophy with a score of 38, with Erasmus Hall High School third with a total of 33. Commercial finished fifth with 16 points, and Poly Prep. pulled home in the rear with 3½ points.

BIGGEST BOWLING CONGRESS OPENS

Champion Pin Knights From Every Section Entered in Tournament.

WELCOMED BY CONTROLLER

Madison Square Garden Alleys Present Novel Scene When the First Balls Start to Roll.

Four thousand bowling enthusiasts, men and women, attended the opening of the third annual tournament of the National Bowling Association at Madison Square Garden last night. It is the first bowling congress that has ever been held in New York, and the indications are that in the three weeks of competition some great records will be made.

The Garden has been transformed into a regular bowlers' paradise. Twenty-four modern alleys have been built across the big amphitheatre, and on these 313 five-man teams, 700 two-man teams, and 1,420 individuals, the pick of America's bowlers, will compete during the tournament for the $50,000 in prizes offered.

In opening the tournament Controller Herman A. Metz said: "I welcome the bowlers of America to the greatest city on the American Continent. It is the first time New York has had the honor of holding a National bowling tournament. It is a stupendous enterprise, and well worthy the support of every New Yorker who takes a pride in his city. The game I have found to be one of the healthiest of indoor pastimes, and I take great pleasure in behalf of the city in formally welcoming the bowlers of the nation to this contest. It is a wonderful piece of work to build twenty-four high-class alleys in only six days, and establishes a world's record at the very start. I sincerely hope every world's record will be broken in the tournament."

Senator M. T. Cochran of New York turned over the alleys on behalf of the builders to President Cordes of the tournament managers, who in turn gave the alleys to the President of the New York Bowling Association, James E. Hardenbergh, and then the alleys were finally transferred to John J. Chajen, President of the National Bowling Association, under whose auspices the tournament will be managed.

With these ceremonies over, the actual competition was opened by those men rolling the first balls down the alleys.

The two individual match contests, which were among the features of the night, were won by New York men. The most conspicuous contest was between Dave Shiman and Dave Woodbury of Chicago, the former champion of the West, the best of eleven games for $1,000 a side. The finish was spectacular, as the match was not decided until the last frame. Shiman got a split on the tenth frame, the king and corner. He rolled them down and then made a strike, winning the match by one pin. The victory was received with tremendous enthusiasm, and Shiman was carried from the alley on the shoulders of his friends. The other special, five out of nine games, for $100 a side, was won by Glen Riddell of New York.

The bout between "Jimmy" Walsh, the American fighter, and "Digger" Stanley of London, for the bantam weight championship of England was declared a draw. The fight went the full fifteen rounds.

SIGNIFICANCE OF DEAR WHEAT.

May wheat sold above $1.33 a bushel yesterday. Mr. PATTEN was denounced some months ago for predicting that it would sell at $1.25. His present prediction is that the days of cheap wheat are over because our "wheat lands are cropped to death." It may be so, and yet the records tell a different tale. Precisely the same soil possesses far higher productivity when the grain sells as much above $1 as it used to sell below it. The "cropped out" fields have been producing more wheat, not less, as the price has risen. For the decade 1887-96 the average yield was 12.7 bushels. For the next decade it was 13.8 bushels, and for the succeeding years it has been variable at a slightly higher range.

This is true also of the world's production. The total supply of wheat has risen by about one-half within ten years, but the consumption has increased even faster. The portentous demand for this choicest of foodstuffs is a phenomenon of prosperity, not of scarcity. There would be even an oversupply if we were willing to eat of it as sparingly as we did a few years ago. And it is not so certain as some of the prophets think that we may not for many years to come supply the world as well as feed ourselves with our old liberality.

There is no reason in nature why the best wheat lands in the world should not produce as much as inferior lands. It is an agricultural possibility that we should double our growth of wheat per acre, and half of our farm lands are unimproved. It has been calculated that 350,000,000 bushels might be raised on 5 per cent. of lands now uncultivated, and that the present yield might be doubled, giving 1,682,000,000 bushels of American-grown wheat by 1940. Fifteen years have passed since Sir WILLIAM CROOKES directed attention to the inadequacy of the world's wheat supplies. We are now eating more than it was then thought possible to produce, and the cessation of our exports is predicted at a time when agricultural exports for the last two crops are at the maximum.

Accepting the views of the pessimists, there is nothing for us to be doleful about. It is more the concern of the rest of the world than of the United States. If we are to eat our own wheat at high prices, the prosperity of our farmers is assured. BRET HARTE's sarcasm that we were ruined by Chinese cheap labor was a mere revamping of the truth about England. That most distressful country's landed interest was ruined by too much cheap food from our virgin soil, which at that time was almost as cheap as air. But the blow did not fall until long after we stopped burning foodstuffs because they were the cheapest fuel, and no other use was economically possible. Unproductive capacity relative to the demand was then greater than now, but distribution was impossible. Even now no farmer can make money unless he is within ten miles of a railway. It is a problem of transportation as well as of agriculture.

The significance of this lies in its application to the world's supplies. Europe produces about half the world's wheat, and America about a quarter. If there is to be any shortage in the world's supplies from the United States it must be supplied from Asia, Africa, or Australasia. They have the soil and climate, and there have been persons imaginative enough to picture the United States importing wheat from China and Manchuria. Those countries plow with a forked stick, and carry their goods in carts with wheels made from a section of a tree. If those countries are to feed the world they must revolutionize their agriculture, and supply themselves with railways. We have but to tear down our tariff fence to supply ourselves from Canada. The rest of the world must look elsewhere, to countries which must learn to use our agricultural machinery, and haul their stuff with American locomotives over American rails.

This brings us to another phase of the question. England was an agricultural country before she became industrial. We are passing through the same development, but under happier auspices. It was England's misfortune that she was not a self-contained country, as we are. We can feed ourselves, and we can supply the world with cheap goods, if we allow ourselves industrial freedom. The compulsion under which we rest to unshackle our industrial exports is indicated from the fact that our farmers have contributed most of our balance of trade. In the last twelve years our agricultural credit balance of trade has increased from an average of $234,000,000 to $411,000,000. If this balance is to decrease in any degree we are under equal necessity of making it good from some other source—otherwise our trade will languish at best, and at worst our credit will suffer. These are the permanent factors of this question. It will be seen that they dwarf the question of whether or not Mr. PATTEN is running a corner, at either a profit or a loss, or whether the coming crop is large, medium, or short. It is a world problem, and its solution is a matter of a generation, regarding which the mutations of the Exchanges indicate nothing.

THE STRIKE IN GEORGIA.

The strike of white firemen on the Georgia Railroad is the first general labor disturbance of racial origin in the history of the South. It is significant in that Georgia is the State in which the negroes have shown the most hopeful advancement. The South has warmly supported BOOKER WASHINGTON in his attempts to uplift the negro industrially. It has denied him political and social equality, but in occupations that do not directly involve social distinctions it has never denied to the negro the right to earn his living. The reason for this was thus cogently stated last week by The Augusta Chronicle:

> Inasmuch as the negro constitutes the bulk of the South's laboring population, to take away from him his "right to labor—" side by side with white men," when necessary—would place the heaviest possible handicap upon the South itself; for it would not only have a surplus of idle negroes to contend with, but a scarcity of labor in all industrial pursuits.

The strike of the firemen, therefore, is not simply an act to curtail the industrial freedom of the negro, it is a direct blow at the economic prosperity of the South. It expresses the newly developed sentiment of the population along the line of the Georgia Railroad, who have mobbed the negro employés of the company. This sentiment is reflected, too, in Gov. HOKE SMITH's refusal to order out troops to guard the railroad's property and traffic and to protect the lives of its employés.

Owing to the inefficiency of the negroes in the South it suffers from a universal labor famine. The peonage system and the Southern treatment of foreign immigrants on a plane with negroes have discouraged white immigration there. Now the State of Georgia declares, in effect, that wherever negroes rise sufficiently to compete with white laborers they shall be thrust back to their former condition of sloth and degeneracy—a continuing menace instead of a means of prosperous uplift.

THE COST OF OPERA.

The statement, fresh from Europe, and credited to Messrs. DIPPEL and GATTI-CASAZZA jointly, that the salary list of the Metropolitan Opera House next season will amount to $2,000,000, is the only important revelation touching the season yet made, and June is fairly upon us. The opera managers have been more alert, conversationally, other years. The new operas announced are those left over from last year's announcements. The engagement of SELMA KURZ is old news. CARUSO is expected to return with his voice as good as ever, and Miss FARRAR will take part in the performances of light opera at the New Theatre. But the bold announcement of the salary list fairly takes one's breath away.

This comprehends, of course, only the wages of the principal singers. The pay of the orchestra and chorus, the mechanical department, the ballet, the scene painters, the ticket takers, and office clerks, the telephone operators, and "supes" is not included. There are to be sixty principals, and if the report is true they are to be paid $2,000,000. This would allow them $33,333.33 each, (with an odd cent or two left to be matched for,) but rewards are not allotted in that even-handed way in the operatic or any other field. CARUSO receives $2,000 every time he sings, while SELMA KURZ, DESTINN, NORDICA, BONCI, and others get the wages of Princes. The regular opera season in New York is limited to twenty weeks, but performances are given in Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Boston, and next year's programme will include forty performances of "opéra lyrique" at the New Theatre. But even with all these the expenditure of $2,000,000 for soloists seems more than extravagant, it seems impossible.

The opera grows more expensive every year, while the invention and skill of composers and librettists seem to be waning. Most of the best-liked works in the modern repertory are more than fifty years old.

SEATTLE'S EXHIBITION.

The Northwestern States are building strong hopes on the Seattle Fair, which is expected to attract unusually large numbers of visitors from the Eastern States this Summer. Already the tide of immigration to the richly productive States of Oregon and Washington is growing, 63,000 settlers having been taken by the railroads to those States and neighboring ones in March and April of this year. There is plenty of room for many thousands more, and a good chance of prosperity for those who go willing to work and also to learn how best to make their labor pay. A little capital, however, is desirable at the start. The present population of Oregon averages seven to the square mile. Rhode Island is prosperous and happy with 417 inhabitants to each of its 1,053 square miles. With their splendid agricultural and mineral resources, and industrial possibilities, Oregon and Washington can well support 200 or more inhabitants to the square mile.

There is a noticeable manifestation of interest in the Alaska-Yukon Exposition all over the country. Of course the neighboring cities of Seattle are just a little jealous of the advertisement she is getting. That is human, and, perhaps, not unwholesome. In Tacoma two "sidewalk conversationalists" of the vaudeville stage made a great hit with this bit of colloquy:

> "Are you going to the Seattle Fair?"
> "Naw," (spoken derisively.)
> "Well, somebody ought to go."

But that makes no difference. Seattle's neighbors will not neglect her exhibition. The Tacoma folks will go in droves. Her hope that she will do something toward making the distant East comprehend the great possibilities of the Northwest is doubtless justified.

THE AMERICAN BLEND.

> I don't regret immigration. I wouldn't be here if it wasn't for that. I'd be scattered over the Continent of Europe. There'd be a little of me in the low country, a mite in France, a portion in Ireland, some more in England and Scotland.

This was the racial pedigree Speaker CANNON gave himself on Saturday in a speech to the City Planning Conference in Washington. There are probably few of us, if we go back far enough, who could not match it in variegation. Those who pride themselves on their "pure" origin usually forget how mixed was the race that their immigrant ancestor belonged to, or with how many strains his line may have been allied since his coming.

It is pleasant to recognize, in the Speaker of the House, the persistence of Holland, the thrift of France, the combativeness of Ireland, the Scotch "faculty of ultimate arrival," and English conservatism. They make a good American blend.

COMMUTATION, DEPORTATION.

We wonder if Superintendent of Prisons COLLINS has only just discovered the Federal law which permits the deportation to the country whence he came of any alien who is convicted of a crime in this country within three years after his arrival here. It is surprising that this law has not been availed of for a general jail delivery of our alien convicts. The Superintendent is preparing to report upon the number of convicts in the State prisons whose cases come within this provision of the law. It is the expectation that the Legislature will act upon the matter in such a way that the sentences of these convicts may be commuted to deportation in order that we may get rid of them all at once.

Mr. COLLINS hopes, too, that New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio will take similar action. In those three States and in this State there are perhaps 5,000 convicts who might be sent out of the country under the three-year law. We cannot imagine that anybody would object to their deportation. It would relieve us of the burden of their cost, and the arrival out of a shipload of convicts would serve as a valuable object lesson to any country that has done us the disfavor of sending them here.

Unquestionably some of the European Governments with which we are upon terms of amity have been accustomed to get rid of their criminals by compelling, urging, or permitting them to take passage for New York. Switzerland was a great offender in this respect for many years until she found it necessary to pay heed to our remonstrances. It is strongly suspected that we owe the presence of many of our Sicilian undesirables to similar action upon the part of local Italian authorities. The culpable collusion of the authorities in any particular case would be very hard to prove, but we do know that we have many foreign criminals here, and that we do not want any more. We do not want even to keep those we have. The hard-working immigrant who comes here to earn a living under the protection of our laws and with the intention of obeying them is welcome. His coming is an advantage. But an immigrant who comes here to pick pockets, shoot, stab, burn, and rob is most unwelcome, and we have been much too complacent about his coming and remaining. There is no exportable commodity we can better spare than the alien convicts into whose number and condition Supt. COLLINS has directed an inquiry to be made.

THE DEFEAT OF TRAVERS.

The defeat of our champion golfer, Mr. JEROME D. TRAVERS of Montclair, in the first round of the tournament for the British championship, over the Muirfield course, in Scotland, yesterday, will cause great disappointment among the American golfers. According to the cable reports all the conditions were favorable for good play. The Scotch seaside courses are the best in the world, and the day was clear and bright.

TRAVERS is a brilliant player when he is, as the saying goes, "on his game." His best play probably equals the best of any player in the world. He is young and still likely to improve greatly. His defeat at the very outset of the British championship tournament will not lessen the esteem in which he is held here, or make him a less dangerous opponent in future contests. It merely illustrates the uncertainty of golf, and especially of championship matches. He was expected, however, to make a brilliant showing for American golf, and the hope for his success was all the stronger because Mr. TRAVIS, his most formidable rival on our links, won the British championship a few years ago.

The young golfer is apt to suffer from one of two evils, overconfidence and overanxiety. In his match yesterday with a St. Andrews man Mr. TRAVERS was evidently the victim of overanxiety. Such details of his play as are cabled indicate that he was nervous and nearly at his worst, where he should have been at his best, in his tee shots. He is generally a long, straight driver. He will have the sympathy of all his friends, and the consolation of knowing that only one man can win a championship, and that the title does not always go to the best player.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Balmy Spring in the Far North.

There is consolation for our chilly weather during the past month, perhaps, in the thought that the arctic explorers and the Eskimos have been having one of the warmest Springs on record. That such has been the case is shown plainly enough by the ususual size of the icebergs and extent of the ice floes that are coming down on the Labrador current. The sun must have been shining ardently up North to break off the ends of the Greenland glaciers in such enormous fragments as are reported by the steamers venturing into the vicinity of Newfoundland.

Some of those stories, including the one brought in by the Madura, of a berg 1,500 feet high, will hardly pass at par among those who remember how much more of floating ice is below than above the surface; but even though the height of that floating mountain simply must have been just a little less than 1,500 feet, it presumably looked fully that tall when viewed from the deck of a steamer which it was threatening to crush, and due allowance must be made for excitement and the artistic instinct. Before making the necessary reduction of that 1,500 feet, too, allowance should be made for the fact that the submerged part of the berg was doubtless many times larger than that extruded from the sea, and that consequently it could support a comparatively slender peak of considerable altitude.

Perhaps the summit wasn't much under 500 feet in the air, and that's a good deal of a hill to be drifting about in the ocean lanes to the disturbing of traffic. As these bergs are of ice as pure as forms anywhere in the world, it does seem a pity that one of them cannot be towed down into this vicinity and cut up to save us from the famine—or the famine prices—with which we are menaced for the approaching Summer. Such a mass as that seen from the Madura, even though it weren't quite 1,500 feet high, would supply our needs for a year at least, and it wouldn't cost a cent except for towing charges. Unfortunately, however, icebergs cannot be towed, and they have a habit of melting all away long before they can drift into what humans would call warm water.

That so many steamers are running in among the bergs is due merely to the fact that the Captains want to save time and coal, and therefore take chances in the northern lanes instead of following the longer ones toward the south. They know their business, of course, but when one of them loses his ship he—or the surviving relatives of his pasengers—may wish that he had been in less of a hurry.

Coney Island Isn't So Very Bad.

On the theory that "the law" is what the courts interpret the statutes to mean, we shall all know more in a few days or weeks than we do now in regard to the technical legality of what has been going on at Coney Island of late years, but we cannot agree with the contention made by one of our correspondents in a letter printed yesterday that the "lawlessness" of that popular resort, using the term in its ordinary significance, has been increasing of late.

That Coney Island has greatly and even amazingly changed from what it was twenty, or even ten years ago, is true. It now entertains on Sunday a hundred people for every one person it then attracted, and, of course, their amusements are not such as to commend themselves to Sabbatarians. On the whole, however, there has been a marked elevation of the insular standards above those that characterized the older days, and it is probably true that a very large majority of those who go there employ themselves more innocently and more profitably than they would do if they had to find in the city a use for their scanty hours of leisure.

The big shows, from every standpoint, except that of "strict observers," are clean and harmless. Not all of the "attractions" are in good taste, and not a few of them are in distinctly bad taste, while the intellectual appeal of none of them is what could easily be called high, but there is a more than fairly successful attempt to be decent as well as interesting, and much is offered besides the joys of alcohol and gambling. Of both the evils named there is still enough and too much, but the one is better controlled than it used to be, and the other is so near the point of suppression that it cannot be found in any of its more serious forms, except by those who look for it under expert and trustful guidance.

As for the rowdiness on the late trains, it causes little trouble to those who go home betimes. Taken all in all, Coney Island is an encouraging, not a discouraging, phenomenon, and conditions there, while not as good as they might be, are, on the other hand, not as bad, and they are getting steadily better with each revolving year. Therefore, why moan?

Will Not Be Minority Stockholders.

Illustrating anew their Yankee shrewdness, the WRIGHT brothers, having sufficiently demonstrated their ability to make flying machines with which other people as well as themselves can navigate the air, are preparing to change from aviators to manufacturers and to turn into money the enormous amount of free advertising which they have had the ingenuity to get.

For some time past everything they did has been news of the most interesting quality, and it promises to be so for some time to come. Hence is it that they do not have to inquire for "rates" when they want the world to know that they are ready to build aeroplanes for anybody who possesses at once the price of a big automobile and a yearning for the upper airs and no speed limits. Already, it seems, they have orders for fifty machines, and the only reason why they haven't a big factory in which to make them is their determination to accept no assistance from the obliging capitalists who are eager to enter the new industry.

They prefer to go slowly, especially in the matter of sharing profits, and as most of us are ready to wait a year or two before buying an aeroplane, they are doubtless wise to keep their business in their own hands. On land, as in the clouds, these brothers have steady heads.

COMPANIES OF FARMERS.

Developing Common Interests Under Conditions of Independence.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under the caption "Better Farms Possible" in THE TIMES yesterday Mr. D. I. Calhoun makes some remarks about farming being unorganized and conducted by farmers in single handed fashion. This is true to a great extent, but if Mr. Calhoun will look a little deeper he will find some very good examples of organization among farmers. Perhaps he will choose to call it dairying, or sugar production, or rice production, &c., nevertheless there have been, and still are, some considerable interests banded together in the ranks of the farmers.

There are literally thousands of creamery associations. There are farm companies and associations in other lines of production, as the Dalrymple farm of North Dakota, famous some years ago as the "biggest" wheat farm. Its superior soon arose, and we would not venture to assert that either of these has not been far eclipsed by others in value of the property involved in the organization or the worth of the output, and it may well be questioned whether in the long run the syndicating into large combinations will not pay better or steadier dividends for the men engaged than to conduct their business independently on smaller scales.

But the sense of ownership and independence of farmers generally induces them to prefer to "go it alone" rather than to take orders from some one "higher up" in the organization for whose farming judgment they have no very great respect. The independence of the individual has a great deal to do with the apparently scattered efforts, possibly resulting in some pecuniary losses, and it may be well for this Nation that no captain of industry can gather the farms generally into one, or a few syndicates or trusts only for the sake of making a little more money at the possible sacrifice of that independence of ownership which characterizes and marks the average farmer from men of other callings.

Isolated they may be, but that is fast giving way to rapid transit and free delivery of mail, &c. As one philosophical farmer-doctor of North Carolina was wont to say of farmers and others: "The people are generally doing as well as they know how." And in this respect the "know how" is rising like a tide on a low seashore.

NON-INTOXICANT WHISKY.

Expresses Hope That Prof. Voyle's Reported Discovery Is Genuine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in THE TIMES of to-day a dispatch from California which has filled me with hope. It says that Prof. Voyle, a chemist of Berkeley University, has discovered "a method of removing the poisonous and intoxicating element from whisky without diminishing its exhilarating power." If this blessed thing has come to pass, the friends of poor, weak humanity may well clap their hands with joy. No more women wringing their lean hands in despair over the wreck of homes which might be the abodes of contentment and happiness! No more frightened children flying from brutal fathers, maddened by vile liquors that turn men into beasts and love into hatred! Lord! what a blessing this would be if this news should be true! Let all the church bells ring, and let the "fuller minstrel" sound his joyful note, for a new era of Christian civilization is about to dawn.

It will, of course, be the duty of the Government, both State and Federal, at once to see if this report is authentic—that all intoxicating liquors should be submitted to the transforming process, and that not a pint be allowed to reach the public until it has been turned from an instrument of death and misery into one of rational exhilaration and pleasant mental emotion.

HUDSON-FULTON FETE.

The Million Spent Upon It Will Not Be Squandered.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Gavin asks you if you "think it rational for a community to spend $1,000,000 in celebrating and have nothing to show for it the next day." He refers, of course, to the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

Our Nation does not begin to compare with other countries in celebrations, public fetes, and holidays. Perhaps, in many ways, this is a good thing. Our pleasure comes only into our private life, seldom indeed into our public life. Yet I think a great event such as Hudson's discovery, and the opening of the river that bears his name, should find some place in the memory of patriotic New Yorkers.

We are made up here in New York of many nationalities and races. We need a celebration now and then to bring to the general notice the struggles which were needed to place this Nation upon a firm basis. Henry Hudson's exploit was one of the first of these. It certainly placed before the world's notice a river and harbor which now rank second in all the earth.

SICILIAN IMMIGRANTS.

Would Harry Them from the Land Because They Shield Crime.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It appears to me that a mistake would be made in shutting out all immigrants, as Prof. Clark would do. There is yet a great work of building new roads and other improvements to be done, and laborers that have respect for law, such as those from the north of Europe have generally shown themselves to be, might safely be admitted. But Southern Italy is quite another proposition. Calabria and Sicily breed a vile assortment of thugs and murderers and a race that deems it honorable to shield its crimes. Their presence here is a continual menace. If the Italian immigrants have good ones among them they are fast losing their good repute through the influence of their evil compatriots. There is no question that the United States does not want them, and they should be harried out to a man.

Letter Box Stuffers Unpunished.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a law making it a misdemeanor to deposit any advertising matter in the letter boxes in the vestibules of flats, apartments, or tenement houses, excepting that deposited by United States letter carriers and going through the mails in the regular way. When the attention of the police is called to the hourly violation of this law they say they "do not see them do it." Of course, this excuse is the invention of an indolent, don't-care, neverwatchful, careless abettor of street nuisances. The postal authorities say that if the police would do their duty, follow and arrest the letter-box stuffers, the mail in our letter boxes would not be disturbed.

"Male Suffragette" Turns.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Women suffragists are obliged to stand a great many unpleasantnesses for their cause—ridicule by no means least among them—but seldom do they murmur. When, however, their champions, or, rather, friends and allies, of the opposite sex step into the field beside them to strengthen and uphold their course, and are hailed by the asinine title of "Male Suffragists," surely it is time for some one to object.

MEDIAEVAL HOSPITALS.

They Were Highly Developed Under Roman Catholic Auspices.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. S. M. Farrell, in THE TIMES for May 21, is quite right in saying that hospitals were in existence before Christianity, and, indeed, there are traces of them as far back as the beginning of history. Virchow, however, who was not likely to exaggerate the influence of the Church, declared that to her was due the organization of hospitals in the modern sense of the word. He said:

> It may be recognized and admitted that it was reserved for the Roman Catholic Church not only to open the source of Christian charity and mercy in all its fullness, but also to guide the life-giving stream into every branch of human life in an ordered manner.—Gesammelte Abhandlungen aus dem Gebiete der oeffentlichen Medicin, Berlin, 1879.

All the rest that Mr. Farrell has to say is nonsense. There were plenty of asylums for the insane before the fifteenth century, and the colony at Gheel, in Belgium, for example, has been in existence since the tenth century, at least. I have shown in "The Popes and Science," in the chapter on "The Church and the Mentally Afflicted," that as a matter of fact the mediaeval people managed this problem of the care for the insane much better than the moderns, until very recent times. People sometimes forget in this matter how low the eighteenth century was in everything relating to charity and humanity. Miss Nutting and Miss Dock, in their "History of Nursing," say that "the dark age in the history of nursing was from the middle of the seventeenth to the middle of the nineteenth century." This is the period when, according to Jacobsohn, the German historian of hospitals and nursing, hospitals were the worst organized, and nursing at the lowest ebb, that they have ever been. He can scarcely say too much, however, in praise of the mediaeval hospitals. It is the awful seventeenth and eighteenth centuries that have fooled modern historians as to the realities of the history of hospitals.

As for the Church opposing surgery, it is amusing. The greatest period in the history of surgery, except our own, comes during the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. One of the greatest surgeons who ever lived—we call him "The Father of Surgery"—was Guy de Chauliac. I lectured on him at Johns Hopkins in February. He did everything that we do in the modern time—opened the skull, drained the thorax, operated within the abdomen, declared that patients would die unless wounds of the intestines were sewed up, and he developed the treatment of hernia and fractures as they were to remain for more than five centuries. We do not know his work by tradition alone, but we have his textbook of surgery which was in common use at the medical schools of Europe for three centuries. He was a Papal Chamberlain and a great friend of four Popes. All his great predecessors—four of them are among the most famous surgeons that ever lived—were clergymen.

Mr. Farrell needs to turn from Dr. Andrew D. White's book, "The Warfare of Theology with Science in Christendom," which is a caricature of history, to a real history of medicine and science, and then he will find some startling facts, and not mere prejudiced assumptions.

OLD-FASHIONED DAMES.

Time They Protested Against Bacchanalian Revels in Name of Charity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My thanks to "An Old-Fashioned Dame," whose letter entitled "Bad Example for Poor Girls" appears in your issue of the 22d. She expresses just what I felt when I looked at the Pictorial Page of THE TIMES of May 16, entitled "Society Women in Bacchanalia."

If those who so exhibited themselves in a charitable entertainment are society women I would inquire what the phrase "society woman" has come to mean. Has it come to mean a woman who is "progressing backward to heathendom," a woman who is trying to vie with those women conspicuous in the orgies of the Roman Court, as depicted in "Quo Vadis"? Is history repeating itself?

It is time for old-fashioned dames to raise their voices, seeing that the ministers do not.

His Insurance Valid Though Hanged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The decree of the United States Court of Appeals in Virginia the other day, compelling the payment of a $20,000 policy on the life of a man legally hanged, recalls the instance some years ago, where a Pennsylvania court sustained the refusal of an industrial company to pay a burial benefit to the heirs of a man dead after the same fashion, on the ground that such payment would be "against public policy."

It would be interesting to learn what form of higher reasoning or profounder law were evolved in the contest for the higher stake which led to the recovery of the earlier decision.

Slow Dispatch of Local Mail.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading Mr. H. A. Elliott's lines about the slow dispatch of the local mail in to-day's issue, I have to raise the same complaint. A letter mailed from Times Square at 6 P. M. was delivered downtown the following afternoon. A letter from downtown Friday, May 14, arrived in Brooklyn on Tuesday, May 18. A letter from Brooklyn downtown Wednesday night reached the addressee on Friday morning. Such delays are annoying and should not happen in the empire city of the New World.

Equal Protection Denied?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read your comments on the act of Judge Dugro in setting aside a verdict in favor of a negro, and they are all right so far as they go, but why did you not call attention to the fact that the Judge violated that rule of the Constitution which declares that "no State shall deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws?" That forbids racial discrimination in a legal decision.

SONNET.

From the Danish of Kai Holberg.

"Wouldst have a bell of deep and perfect sound,
So perfect that the metal melts in air
And is all music? Seek thou, then, with care
The fairest virgin in thy land around."
So Chinese priests of making gongs expound,
That all their folk may hasten, glad, to prayer.
"When thou hast found the woman pure and fair,
In the hot metal then must she be drowned."

To me, a poet, came a maiden bright,
Who looked not back, who would become a part
Of all my music, die that she might give
My song new harmonies; in the fierce light
And flaming of the furnace of my heart
Her girlhood perished that my songs might live!

QUESTIONS TO JEROME ARE MOUNTING UP

Two Hundred Have Been Sent to Him Already for To-morrow Night's Meeting.

MANY ARE TRIVIAL, HE SAYS

One Man Vows He'll Be on the Platform to Enforce Answers to His Queries.

Interest among the politicians this week centres in the Cooper Union meeting to-morrow evening, when District Attorney Jerome will undertake to answer questions put to him in writing regarding his administration. Friends of Mr. Jerome expressed the opinion yesterday that he would be able to face down all his critics.

Under the rules made by Mr. Jerome himself for the question bee, no queries received by him later than this morning will be noticed. He said yesterday that he had received in all about 200 questions, but that the interrogators numbered only about thirty or forty.

Some sent several questions bearing on different phases of his administration of the District Attorney's office. William N. Amory, who carried his campaign against the New York traction interests into the District Attorney's office several years ago and since has expressed extreme dissatisfaction with the result, sent 108 questions for Mr. Jerome to answer.

Many of the queries are of so little public interest, or so ludicrous in essence or form, that unless Mr. Jerome should desire to relieve the discourse by infusing a comedy element he will pay no attention to them.

The police are preparing for a record breaking crowd. Many of Mr. Jerome's critics and interrogators have signified in letters to him that they intend to be on hand to see that their questions are not ignored. One of his critics wrote that he would be on the platform to see that his questions were answered.

"I feel sorry for him," said Mr. Jerome last night. "I don't see how he is going to get there."

He added that all the questions of broad public interest—those with which he intends to deal at all extensively—could be roughly classified under three heads—traction, insurance, and ice. A majority of the questioners started out on the presumption that Mr. Jerome had been remiss in conducting prosecutions against certain interests, and that in a general way he failed to carry out his ante-election pledges.

At the Cooper Union meeting held two weeks ago Mr. Jerome said he would stay until daylight if necessary to answer fully all questions put to him seriously and in good faith. At present he does not believe, however, that any of those attending the meeting should bring with them midnight luncheons, or that the meeting ought to open with the singing of the familiar song, "We Won't Go Home Till Morning."

"I think the answers to questions submitted in writing will consume some three hours at least. I don't see how we will be able to reach oral questions which cannot be put until the written questions have been answered," said Mr. Jerome last night.

JEROME MAY SUE THE WORLD.

Reproduction of Journal Editorials in the Evening Edition Stirs Him Up.

District Attorney Jerome issued a statement yesterday explaining his action in postponing the trial of his suits for libel against the Star Publishing Company, publisher of The Evening Journal, making public also a letter from Clarence J. Shearn, in which the postponement is asked for as an accommodation. Mr. Jerome denounced The Evening World for an article printed last night, in which the alleged libelous editorials—one from The American and one from The Evening Journal—are published in full. His statement said:

> I wish to say that I have read the article, and that the trial of the action had been set down, upon my motion, for June 7, and that I was eager and determined to have it tried. After that Mr. Carvalho of The Journal came and, as a personal favor, requested an adjournment of the case.
>
> I was more than desirous of having it go on, as I informed him, and only as a personal accommodation to Mr. Carvalho and Mr. Shearn, who subsequently wrote a letter to me, did I consent to let it go over until Autumn. Its going over until after election was only at Mr. Carvalho's and Mr. Shearn's request.
>
> Since the publication of the article in The World I have asked Mr. Carvalho about it, and he has authorized me to state these facts, and has expressed his entire willingness to let them be so stated. The attack is a scandalous and cowardly one, because it is an effort to repeat without incurring responsibility.
>
> I believe that the effort to evade this responsibility under form of the statute has not been successful, and I am having that question examined into, and, should it appear that The World's cowardly method has not allowed them to avoid responsibility, I will bring suit against The World. If The World, however, is willing to stand individually for the matters it has published, it will have only to insert in its next issue the statement that it believes in the truth of the allegations in the article, and I will at once give it the opportunity of making good.

$40,000,000 CITY BOND ISSUE.

Sale on June 8—Metz Places Debt Margin at $50,000,000.

Controller Metz has advertised for bids on $40,000,000 worth of fifty-year 4 per cent. city bonds, to be disposed of by public sale on June 8. The last bond sale held by the Department of Finance was on March 2, when $10,000,000 worth of bonds were sold by the city at an average price of 101.57.

The present sale will supply the city, it is believed, with sufficient cash for the balance of the current year. The $40,000,000 will not be charged up to the debt limit; it will be devoted to meeting outstanding contract and land liabilities. Ten million dollars will go to the Board of Water Supply for the Catskill aqueduct project, $3,200,000 for rapid transit purposes, $800,000 for the Public Library, $2,000,000 for street improvements, and $24,000,000 for miscellaneous purposes.

With the announcement of the sale the Controller issued a statement in which he fixes the debt margin of the city on April 1 at $50,000,000. If Gen. Tracy's report is affirmed, approximately $100,000,000 will be added to these figures. The Controller's computation of the margin is:

Net funded debt	$547,607,049.91
Net contract liability	33,953,404.00
Lands acquired	21,866,359.32
Revenue bonds of 1904	2,470,000.00
Revenue bonds of 1905	7,400,000.00
Revenue bonds of 1906	9,150,000.00
Revenue bonds of 1907	2,625,000.00
Total	$625,071,813.23

This amount subtracted from $672,241,578.90, 10 per cent. of the assessed valuation of taxable real estate, leaves $47,169,765.67. To this is added $3,096,171.11, proceeds of past bond sales not yet apportioned to the various accounts.

Transactions in the bonds to be sold by the city on June 8 were made on the Curb yesterday at 102. The opinion was expressed in banking circles that this $40,000,000 of 4 per cent. bonds would find a ready market, the recent demand for city bonds having been fairly good.

LAMBS' STAR GAMBOL BRINGS IN $32,000

Metropolitan Opera House Filled for the First Performance in Their Tour.

PROMINENT ACTORS IN CAST

Old-Fashioned Minstrel Show Was Followed by Skits in Which Many Stage Favorites Took Part.

An audience that completely filled the Metropolitan Opera House so that when the doors were closed there was not even standing room for sale, warmly applauded the Lambs' all-star gambol last night. The affair went off without a hitch, and when it was over about midnight it was announced that the receipts for the evening's entertainment amounted to $32,000, or nearly a third of the amount which the Lambs expect to raise on their week's tour.

The programme was a long one, but the managers had arranged for plenty of comedy, and the audience was kept laughing throughout most of the performance. The Opera House resembled one of the busiest nights of the opera season. Persons well known in society occupied the boxes, and the carriages blocked Broadway and the near-by streets for blocks.

The first number on the programme was an old-time minstrel first part, with modern amplifications, for which Victor Herbert's orchestra of fifty pieces furnished the music. When the curtain rose it disclosed a row of black-face stars whose identity the audience had hard work to establish. The interlocutor was De Wolf Hopper, the bones Charles Evans, Ignacio Martinetti, Raymond Hitchcock, and Maclyn Arbuckle, and the tambourines, Andrew Mack, Edward Harrigan, Eddie Foy, and Nat M. Wills.

The audience leaned forward to catch a minstrel joke with the old time flavor, but the best it got was the remark from Eddie Foy, that he felt finer than Salome "because he was dancing before a royal house without a single deadhead." Just then George Leon Moore sang "Sweet Genevieve," and Bones Raymond Hitchcock got it through his head that it was all about Jenny Eve, and he wanted to meet Jenny's mother.

There was plenty of singing in the minstrel part, Eddie Foy giving "Down Where the Watermelon Grows"; William Stewart, "Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Still"; Nat Wills, "Alexander Jones"; George Hamlin, "Then You'll Remember Me"; Charles Evans, "Mr. Brown"; Andrew Mack, "Go 'Way, Mistah Moon," and Eugene Cowles, the old ballad, "Annie Laurie."

In explaining the meaning of alimony, Mr. Hopper asked the other performers if they were at all acquainted with the word. The unanimity with which they responded left no doubt that they were. As a finale the Lambs' triple sextet and company sang "I Want to be a Good Lamb."

The second feature was the forum scene from "Julius Caesar," with James O'Neill as Brutus and De Wolf Hopper as Marc Antony. The scene was played skillfully by both actors, Mr. Hopper's oration especially appealing to the audience.

An interesting feature of the scene was the fact that the mob was made up entirely of well-known actors, playwrights, and theatrical managers. William Muldoon was a Captain of the Guards, which included George V. Hobart, Joseph Miron, and Eugene Cowles.

Among the citizens who furnished more noise and action than probably any other supernumeraries have ever supplied before were Dustin and William Farnum, Maclyn Arbuckle, Wilton Lackaye, Digby Bell, David Belasco, Joseph Brooks, Henry M. Blossom, R. H. Burnside, George Broadhurst, Wallace Eddinger, Joseph R. Grismer, Max Hirsch, Raymond Hitchcock, Charles Klein, Hassard Short, Augustus Thomas, Joseph Weber, and Nat Wills.

Joseph Weber and Lew Fields furnished some of the best fun of the evening in their old skit, "A Game of Pool."

A pleasing musical number, in which the chorus girls were so cleverly impersonated by men that few would have known they were not women if the programme had not announced it, was "After the Matinée," written especially for the gambol by Benjamin Hapgood Burt. Donald Brian played the part of the man.

George V. Hobart's comedy, "Tuesday," was another number which provoked much laughter. It showed just how rehearsals go on behind the scenes. Joseph Grismer was the stage manager, and he stood down in one of the orchestra aisles and showed the audience at first hand just how he directs a show. There was no plot to speak of, everybody evidently trying to get as much fun out of the situation as possible.

There was a marriage scene in which the hero, Wilton Lackaye, held the heroine, Donald Brian, in his arms so long that the author, Clay M. Greene, tore his hair and stormed at Grismer. Eddie Foy as the property man got chased across the stage by an Italian fruit vendor, and then in revenge pulled the "snow box" at the wrong time and precipitated a snowstorm in the church. John Mason got mixed in his lines, and when he cried "That pauper marries me or you go to a girl's grave," the author gave up in despair.

It came out all right, finally, because they called off the rehearsal.

Augustus Thomas in one of the intermissions auctioned off a programme containing all the players' autographs. Henry B. Harris paid him $600 for it.

SOTHERN-MARLOWE PLANS.

Two Stars to be Seen in Shakespeare at Academy of Music.

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe, it was announced yesterday, will appear in an elaborate revival of Shakespearean repertoire for an engagement of three weeks at the Academy of Music beginning next Monday evening. For the first week they will present "Romeo and Juliet," for the week of Monday, June 7, "Hamlet" and "The Merchant of Venice," and for the last week, beginning Monday, June 14, "Twelfth Night" and "The Taming of the Shrew." The appearance of the two stars in the revival is for this engagement only.

The entire scenic equipment of the production of "Romeo and Juliet" was taken yesterday to the Majestic Theatre, Boston, where Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe will present the Shakespearean tragedy Thursday night of this week. It will then be immediately transferred back to the Academy of Music. The two stars have been rehearsing their company for the last week in Boston, and their coming appearance will be the first time they have been seen in this play since their appearance at the Academy two years ago.

"THE GAME OF LOVE" A RECKLESS TANGLE

New Play at Wallack's Lacking in Moral and Motive in Its Lines.

Attracted by advance notices that emanated from a series of special performances given in Baltimore two weeks ago, a throng of first-nighters filled Wallack's Theatre last night for the first production here of the new comedy drama, "The Game of Love." There was much speculation as to the real character of the play before the rise of the curtain, but after the first few lines had been spoken there remained little doubt.

The theatre is managed by Charles Burnham, President of the Theatrical Managers' Association, who was one of the outspoken critics of improper plays in public protests against several productions a few months ago, and some of his rival managers were therefore keenly interested in the tendencies of the new play produced at Wallack's.

"The Game of Love" was written by Federico Mariani, formerly son-in-law of Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland. The time is early Spring of the first year of the twentieth century, and the place is given as "wherever the game is played."

The first act of the play opens in the studio of Alfred Britton, an artist, about whom the whole play revolves. He is a successful artist, who in his early days loved the woman who became the wife of his friend, Richard Holmes. Because she scorned a poor but promising artist and chose a successful man of affairs is the reason that Britton gave for becoming a cynic and exercising his wiles to get revenge.

He began by breaking up the home and causing a divorce in the family of another friend, Robert Watson. Then he turned his attention to the woman who had once jilted him. He makes love, also, to Holmes's sister and continues his attentions to Watson's divorced wife.

Britton succeeds in getting Watson's sister engaged to him, and she plans to run away with him. The wife's old infatuation is awakened and she starts to pay him a midnight visit in his studio while her husband is supposedly on a trip out of town. She and Britton are met on the outside by Watson, who shoots Britton, putting him in a hospital for five weeks.

Britton finally marries Watson's divorced wife, who as a trained nurse cares for him in the hospital.

Those in the audience who followed the play carefully were asking each other at the fall of the last curtain what the moral was and what was the motive of the play. There was little or no action, and the broadness of the lines was not intended to inspire much enthusiasm.

The press agent looked the new arrivals over, and then, with the recent Sunday-closing agitation in mind, promptly named them McClellan, Bingham, and McCarren. The mother has been in captivity for nine years.

TO STAGE "INNER SHRINE."

The story first appeared in Harper's Magazine, and the name of the author has not yet been disclosed. The anonymity of the writer, it is announced, will be preserved by the producers of the play, the secrecy being made a part of the agreement.

Klaw & Erlanger and Mr. Brooks have also engaged Lillian Albertson for the leading woman's rôle in a new play called "Through a Window," by Gertrude Nelson Andrews. The action of the drama takes place in San Francisco on the evening before and the morning of the earthquake. The story deals with municipal graft and its exposure. Both plays will be produced early in the Fall.

BREWER'S WIDOW NOT A PRINCESS

Don del Drago, Who Married Mrs. Josephine Schmid, Comes, However, of a Noble Family.

SPANISH QUEEN'S GRANDSON

His Father, Prince del Drago, Is Still Alive—Bridegroom Has Three Brothers Older Than Himself.

Mrs. Josephine Schmid, the wealthy widow of August Schmid, the brewer, who was married to Don Giovanni del Drago at the Church of the Sacred Heart, Brooklyn, last Saturday afternoon, does not become a Princess by this alliance, although she has married a member of a princely house.

Giovanni del Drago is the fourth son of the Prince del Drago, who was born in 1824 and is still alive. He lives in Rome, and married Maria del Carmen y Bourbon, Marquesa de Castillejo, daughter of Maria Christina, Queen of Spain, and her last husband, the Duc of Rianzares.

Don del Drago, moreover, although never married according to the rules of his Church, is, nevertheless, a divorced man, and has a son about 20 years old. Another interesting fact is that he is a Swiss citizen, having married in that country when very young a singer. It was in Switzerland also that the divorce was obtained. Certain Swiss marriages are not recognized by the Church, and this was one of them. It was never recorded in the Almanach de Gotha.

The bridegroom is a little over 47 years old. He has been in this country about five years. He came here for the purpose of disposing of some jewelry which belonged to his grandmother, Queen Maria Christina. The jewels consisted of two crowns and other pieces, which had been worn by Maria Christina when she was Queen of Spain. The negotiations, however, were not successful, and since then del Drago has engaged in commercial pursuits.

Queen Maria Christina was the Princess of the two Sicilies. She was a Bourbon, and contracted a morganatic marriage with an Englishman named Ward, by whom she had several children. Later she married Ferdinand VII., father of Queen Isabella and great-grandfather of the present King of Spain. After his death she became the wife of the Duc of Rianzares. She died in 1878.

The old Prince del Drago has four sons. The eldest, Prince Ferdinando, has two sons, the elder being about 27 years old. He will eventually succeed to the title. The other brother is also married and has a family, so that there are nearly a dozen lives between Mrs. Schmid's husband and a title.

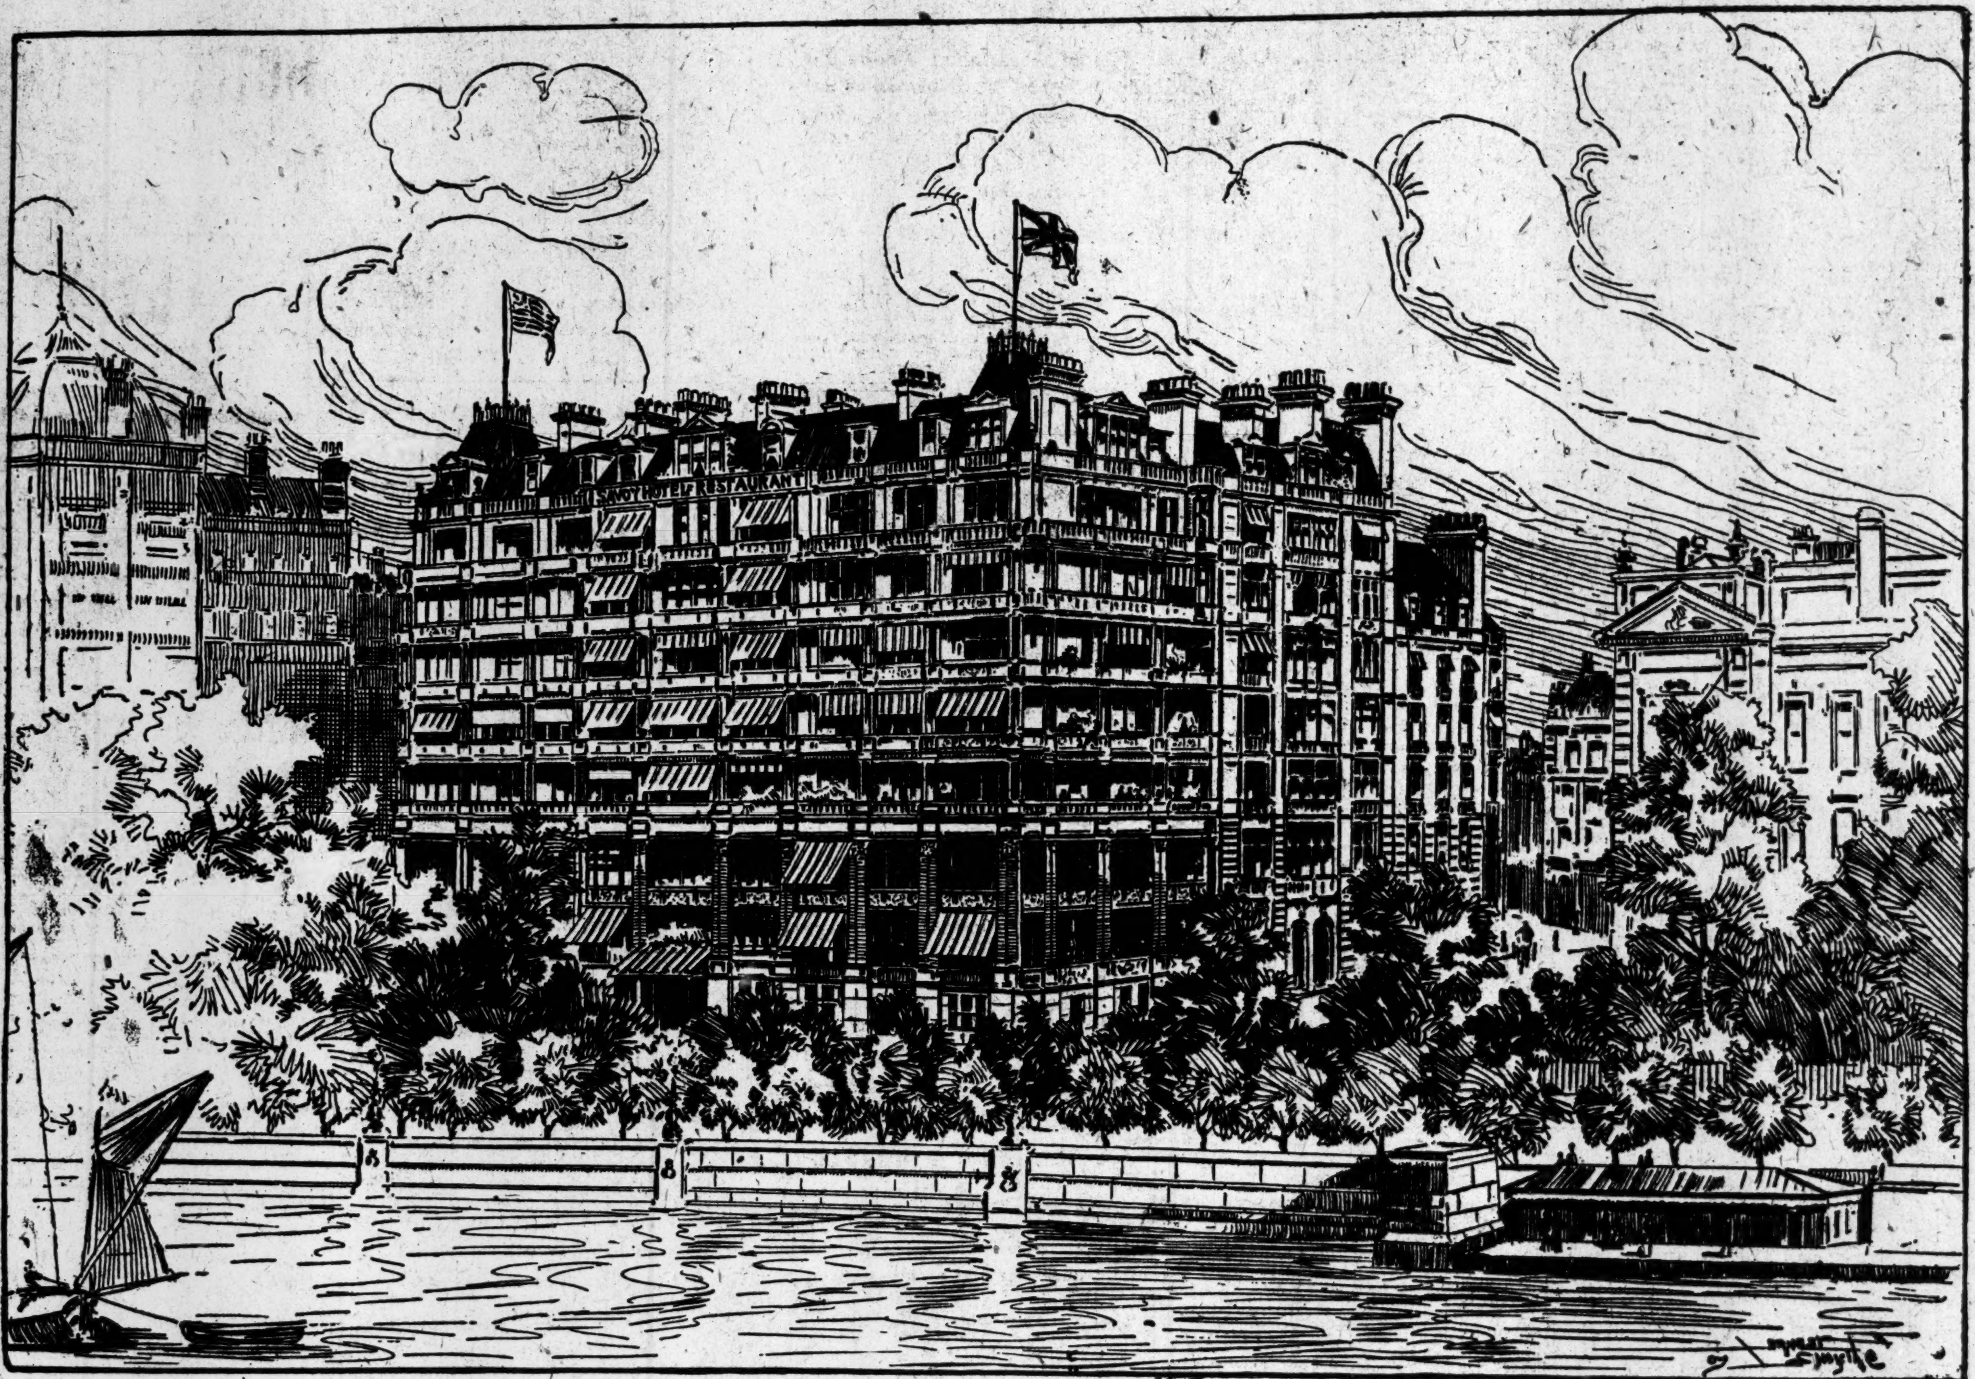
SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON, ENGLAND

THE WORLD'S MOST FAMOUS HOTEL DE LUXE



RIVER VIEW OF SAVOY HOTEL

Have you ever heard the expression "LOAD-FACTOR"? Do you know what it means?

It is used in connection with the supply of Electricity. If an installation is able to dispose of its full current during every hour of the 24 hours, it is said to have a "LOAD-FACTOR" of 100 per cent. If it can only dispose of it during 12 hours of the 24, and is idle for the remaining 12 hours, it has a "LOAD-FACTOR" of 50 per cent. and so on.

You will easily see that the higher the "LOAD-FACTOR" the more cheaply can the current be sold; because all the "Fixed Charges" such as Rent, Rates, Taxes, Insurance, Cost of Buildings, Machinery, Wages, Administration Expenses, &c., remain the same, whether much or little current is used.

People often ask how it is that the SAVOY HOTEL, LONDON, can provide the beautiful Public and Private Reception Rooms, the Luxuriously fitted Bedrooms—with bathrooms attached—the Unrivalled Cuisine, the Finest Orchestra, and the Greatest Comfort generally at such Moderate Charges, in fact at no Higher Price than is charged for much less Luxury and Comfort elsewhere.

THE ANSWER IS: "Because the SAVOY HOTEL, LONDON, has a 'LOAD-FACTOR' of 100 per cent." In other words, because the SAVOY HOTEL is always full.

Therefore, when you want an Hotel in London have the word "LOAD-FACTOR" firmly fixed in your mind. Go to an Hotel which has a good "LOAD-FACTOR" or, to put it in another way, one which is always full—for then you will get the best value for your money.

GOOD JUDGES

"Last year the Chief Justice and
"several of the Judges of the Supreme "Court of the United States, when visit"ing London, took up their quarters at
"the Savoy Hotel. Quite recently we "noticed the names of no less than five
"other Judges of the Supreme Court in
"the Savoy's list of guests. It is evident "that the great discrimination which the "Judges bring to bear in their Courts
"upon the complexity of the affairs of "life, also enables them successfully to
"select an hotel of which they are indeed
"good judges, for the comforts and luxury
"of the SAVOY HOTEL, its cuisine
"and service, combined with the most
"moderate charges, place it absolutely in
"the front rank of all hotels in Europe.
"The beautiful suites, with bathrooms
"attached, overlooking the River
"Thames and Embankment Gardens,
"away from the noise and bustle of
"street traffic, although in the centre of "London, are greatly appreciated by all
"American travellers."

R. A. CHESEBROUGH RETIRES.

Quits Presidency of Standard Oil Subsidiary Because of Age Limit.

Robert A. Chesebrough, for thirty-three years President of the Chesebrough Manufacturing Company, the vaseline manufacturing concern, with headquarters at 17 State Street, has left the Presidency of that company, his place having been taken by Oswald M. Camman, his nephew, former Vice President. Mr. Chesebrough quit the position in obedience to the age-limit rule of the Standard Oil Company. The Chesebrough Company has been one of the Standard's subsidiaries since 1881.

Mr. Chesebrough was born in England almost seventy-three years ago. He began the manufacture of coal oil and petroleum in 1858, and in 1870 invented and patented vaseline. He formed a company to manufacture and market it six years later. After five years this company, with its valuable exclusive patent rights, was absorbed by Standard Oil. Mr. Chesebrough's nephew was elected to succeed him on Thursday last at the Chesebrough Directors' regular meeting. Mr. Chesebrough will remain a Director.

"I passed out in accordance with the Standard Oil's seventy-year age-limit rule," Mr. Chesebrough said at his home, 56 East Forty-ninth Street, yesterday. "I am almost 73 years old, and am gradually giving up my various responsibilities. But I did not resign."

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The market touched new high levels yesterday, the scare being started by bullish news from Kansas. Rains fell quite generally west of the Mississippi River, and so far as weather conditions were concerned, the outlook was satisfactory. Liverpool showed an advance of ½@¾d., while Berlin was ½c. lower, and Budapest 3½c. lower than Saturday. Owing to a holiday no report on the Canadian visible was made, but the domestic visible decreased 1,740,000 bushels. Notwithstanding the high prices, receipts failed to improve very much, the total being 358,000 bushels, including 36,000 at Winter wheat points. Cash wheat in New York closed: No. 2 red, $1.45 elevator, and $1.45, free on board, afloat, both nominal; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.89⅝, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.41½, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—Notwithstanding big receipts, with fully 534 cars estimated for to-day, the market made new high records yesterday. There was not as much corn for sale as the heavier movement would seem to justify. All points had 858,000 bushels, compared with 640,000 bushels a year ago. Liverpool closed ⅜d. lower, and the visible supply decreased 156,000 bushels. Cash corn in New York continued nominal, closing as follows: No. 2 corn, 85c. elevator, and 81½c., free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 84½c., and No. 2 yellow, 84½c., free on board, afloat.

TRACTION SALE POSTPONED.

Metropolitan Foreclosure Fixed for November by Judge Lacombe.

Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, signed an order yesterday once more postponing the sale of the Metropolitan Street Railway properties under the foreclosure of the Guaranty Trust Company's $12,500,000 mortgage, this time from June 29, the date of the last postponement, to Nov. 18 or later. The reason assigned was the inability of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to hear the appeal of the trust company from certain features of the foreclosure decree until its October term.

Judge Lacombe says in his order postponing the sale:

> Although the decree of foreclosure and sale in this suit was entered on March 18, the mortgagee has so delayed the prosecution of the appeal that the last day on which a motion could be made for a hearing has passed without bringing it to the attention of that court. The appeal cannot be heard before the next term, which opens Oct. 11. Under these circumstances sale cannot be had before Nov. 18. The special master will take the necessary steps to adjourn it accordingly.

This postponement of the foreclosure sale will meet very well the needs of the Reorganization Committee of the Metropolitan Street Railway bondholders. Up to the present time that committee has been unable to formulate any definite plan of readjustment owing to the impossibility of figuring out how the property could earn enough to meet the charges on the minimum amount of capital which might possibly be left against it in a reorganization. It has been hoped that as the properties came into better and better physical shape under the operation of the receivers, the earnings would improve. This has been in a measure realized in the case of the Third Avenue road, although that road has not earned enough to pay what used to be its charges for interest alone, but on the Metropolitan system proper the results have been most discouraging, and the bondholders, at latest reports, were about as far in the dark as ever.

Accordingly the adjournment of the sale will give them further leeway to work out their plans and avoid the necessity of their raising immediately the cash required to bid the property in and to operate pending financial reorganization.

RISE IN NEW ARMOUR BONDS.

Heavy Subscriptions Received for the $30,000,000 Issue.

Public offering is being made to-day of the $30,000,000 of Armour & Co. 4½ per cent. bonds purchased last week by Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for their own account and that of the National City Bank. The subscription price of the bonds is 95½ and interest. The bonds were traded in yesterday in the open market as high as 97¼ "when issued," very large subscriptions for the bonds having been received by the bankers even in advance of the public offering. The demand for the bonds came from all over this country and also in large amounts from Europe. The response to the offer was said in banking circles to have been more general than that accorded any offer of industrial bonds placed in this market. The subscriptions received yesterday were said to include a number from institutions which usually do not invest in industrial bonds.

A. BOOTH & CO. REORGANIZED.

Frank C. Letts to be President of New Booth Fisheries Company.

CHICAGO, May 24.—The Booth Fisheries Company, a $7,000,000 corporation founded on the ruins of A. Booth & Co., to-day elected Frank C. Letts President. The branch offices, closed at the time of the failure, will, it is said, be reopened to-morrow.

The reorganized company, it is said, is heir to a fine of $1,000 imposed upon the old company for rebating. The company was found guilty two years ago of accepting rebates from the Nickel Plate and Lehigh Valley Railways, but sentence was not imposed until to-day.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 24.—Sentiment among local traders appeared to be somewhat mixed today. Opening prices were firm, and a good demand appeared for a number of the copper shares, while others were under pressure. Continued selling of North Butte was noted, the price declining from 59½, the opening figure, to 57, and Amalgamated lost nearly a point. On the other hand the U. S. Smelting stocks were again active and higher, and Butte Coalition was well bought at around 27. The general list closed irregular, but with no great amount of stock pressing for sale.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—Strength of United Improvement shares and allotment warrants was the main feature in the Philadelphia market. A large part of the sales of United Gas Improvement warrants came in odd lots. Cambria Steel rose about to 39 on very moderate buying. Traction stocks moved in small volume only. The market closed steady.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Prices See-saw on Active Trade—Closes 2 Points Down to 6 Up.

Cotton opened barely steady, at a decline of 3@8 points yesterday, sold 8 to 11 points lower, rallied to a net gain of 1@8 points, and closed very steady, net 2 points lower to 6 points higher. Business was fairly active, but seemed to be largely in the way of continued evening up for over the holidays at the end of the week and the Government's report on June 4.

The early decline was due to lower cables than due, and some further light showers in the Southwest. Bullish spot advices from Memphis helped the advance. The average estimate of fifty-six members of the local trade placed the condition at 74.5 per cent. and the decrease in acreage at 2 per cent. Complaints continue to come in from the central belt of excessive precipitation and low temperatures.

The range of contract prices follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Sat. Close.
May	11.27	11.18	11.24@11.25	11.26

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged, at 11.65c for middling upland and 11.90c for middling Gulf. Sales nil; delivered on contract, 6,300 bales.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Charleston quiet, ¼c higher, at 11c; sales, 50 bales. Norfolk steady, unchanged, at 11⅛c; sales, 40 bales. Augusta steady, 1-32c lower, at 11c; sales, 56 bales. Galveston quiet and easy, unchanged, at 10⅞c; sales, 565 bales. New Orleans, quiet and easy, unchanged, at 10¾c; sales, 650 bales. Memphis firm, unchanged, at 10⅝c; sales, 700 bales. Houston quiet, unchanged, at 10¾c; sales, 29 bales.

INDICTS BROKER WELLINGTON.

Grand Jury Accuses Him of Bigamy—He Is Released on Bail.

The Grand Jury found an indictment yesterday charging Samuel B. Wellington, a broker, living at the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, with bigamy. Wellington was arrested last week on the complaint of Mrs. Maud W. Wellington, who said that she had married him twelve years ago in Jersey City. He was released from the Tombs yesterday when bail was furnished by a bonding company.

Mrs. Wellington complained to the District Attorney when she saw an announcement of Wellington's marriage on April 22 last to Miss Florence May Cushman, a manicure in the Hoffman House. At the time of his arrest Wellington, it is said, admitted both marriages, but said that he had not seen the first Mrs. Wellington for twelve years.

The prisoner will be arraigned to-morrow before Judge Foster in General Sessions for pleading.

TO OPEN HIGGINBOTHAM SAFE.

District Attorney Also Wants to Trace Bail Money Found in His Desk.

An effort is being made by the District Attorney in Brooklyn to determine how the $500 bill which was found in Magistrate Higginbotham's desk in the Bedford Avenue Court on Saturday got there. As soon as Mr. Elder arrived at his office yesterday morning he tried to obtain the envelope in which the money was found. He was told on Saturday that it was a plain white envelope without a word of writing on it, whereas Magistrate Higginbotham had told the District Attorney when a search was begun for the missing bail money belonging to Mrs. William Donohue that he had put it in a long envelope and locked it in a safe in the old Lee Avenue Court. It was said to have been indorsed with the name of Daniel Quinn, complaint clerk.

Mr. Elder asked Henry Hasenflug, a clerk in Magistrate Higginbotham's court, who took charge of the money after it was found, for the envelope, but he was told it had been lost. Hasenflug was notified to produce the envelope as soon as possible. Mr. Elder wants to know what became of the writing which Magistrate Higginbotham said was on the envelope.

The $500 bill which Mrs. Donohue gave to Magistrate Higginbotham for the release of her husband from the observation ward of the Kings County Hospital was drawn from the New York Savings Bank on June 24, 1908. The bill found in the Magistrate's desk was turned over to the City Chamberlain yesterday, and Mr. Elder intends to try to find out today whether or not it was put in circulation after the date Mrs. Donohue drew her money from the bank.

Mr. Elder said yesterday that Magistrate Higginbotham's safe, now under seal in the Clymer Street Police Station, will be opened, notwithstanding the discovery of the $500 bill in the Magistrate's desk.

The organization now purposes to supply the United States Life Saving Stations with clothing, blankets, and other necessary articles for giving aid to the shipwrecked; to advance the interests of the keepers and crews of the life saving stations; to aid them in cases of emergency, and to co-operate, when possible, in general measures for relief in times of public National calamity.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Inactive and Heavy—Call Money Rates, 1½@2 Per Cent.

HILL SHARES ARE STRONG

With Erie Issues, They Monopolize Activity in Railroad Group—Much New Financing Announced.

In the limited number of stocks in which anything like activity prevailed yesterday higher prices were made; elsewhere the dullness naturally created heaviness. United States Steel was again active and strong, the financial advance in the stock marking another new high record, and certain other steel company shares, notably those of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, were likewise firm, or inclined to rise. In the railroad group the Hill shares and the Erie shares stood out from the rest of this department by reason of their strength and the volume of business done in them. As for the rest of the market it displayed once more the tendency, so often noted in the past, to lapse into quietude upon the appearance of realizing sales. For the strength of the Steel stocks the very obvious improvement in the business itself is responsible, orders for structural material and wire products having been so heavy for a month or more as to result, in the case of the Steel Corporation, at least, in a substantial enlargement in the percentage of plant capacity now in operation. Some discussion, entirely unofficial, of the possibility of larger payments by the Burlington went hand in hand with the advances in Great Northern and Northern Pacific, and an optimistic interview with the chief executive of the Erie helped the stocks of that road in a market way, although the underlying source of strength here is in the much easier financial position of the company. An interesting happening of the day was the restoration by the Boston & Maine of the 10 per cent. salary cuts made by it on Feb. 14 last. A restrictive influence was exercised upon the market as a whole by the further rise in wheat prices and the heated arguments among crop experts over the probable size of the Kansas harvest. The people of Kansas have seen their wheat crops destroyed so often by the experts, only to revive under the beneficent attention of nature, as to regard with considerable fortitude the annual onslaught of the experts.

So easy a money market position as the present is, of course, an invitation to corporations of all kinds requiring financing to attend to their needs, and in addition to the public offering of the Armour 4½ per cent. bonds, sold to the bankers last week, there were announced yesterday the sale of $9,000,000 of bonds of one of the Steel Corporation's railroads, and the coming public sale of $40,000,000 of city bonds. Movements in the foreign exchange market have led to a temporary cessation of gold engagements, which may be renewed at any moment, however, since, so far as conditions here are concerned, they are still favorable.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Day of Moderate Activity with Price Movements Irregular on the Curb.

ARMOUR BONDS ARE ACTIVE

New 4½s Sell Up ¾ of a Point, but at Close Are Even with Opening Levels—Mining List Irregular.

Trading on the Curb was in moderate volume yesterday, and price movements were irregular, with the tendency, among the coppers at least, toward lower levels. Nevada Consolidated declined ¼ and Miami the same amount, while Greene-Cananea closed even with the opening prices. On the other hand, Cumberland-Ely and United Copper gained ⅛ and Ray Consolidated ⅝. The bond list was sluggish, although some interest was manifested in the new Armour 4½s, which sold $71,000 between 96½ and 97¼, closing even with the opening. The New York City 4s were traded in "when issued," selling 10,000 shares at 102.

The principal quotations reported yesterday in the outside market, with opening, high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

How to Know Subscribers.

It may become necessary for banking houses in Wall Street to employ private detectives to investigate subscribers to bond offerings if the new ruling of the Stock Exchange regarding business between its members and members of the Consolidated Exchange is finally enforced. Practically all the big banking houses are represented in the Stock Exchange membership, and when they bring out bond offerings among the subscribers are many Consolidated houses which want the bonds either for themselves or for clients. A strict interpretation of the new rule would compel all banking houses to refuse to sell bonds to a Consolidated member, a fact which raises the interesting question of what the courts might do about it if a disgruntled subscriber brought suit against the banker.

***

Is the Ruling Elastic?

Perhaps it may be argued by the Stock Exchange that the rule was meant to cover only the purchase and sale of stocks with members of the other Exchange, but if so the wording is badly in need of revision, and when properly revised the rule will still be one which might well cause the most imperial of trusts to ponder its own rudimentary methods.

***

Room Traders Bearish.

Most of the room traders were bearishly disposed toward the market yesterday and were playing for a reaction. Few of them, however, seemed inclined to go short of any large blocks of stock, the majority contenting themselves with selling 100 or 200 shares for a quick turn. They argued that a good share of the short interest had been eliminated by last week's rise in prices, and the comparatively small borrowing demand for stocks seemed to corroborate this theory, but no one is in a position to tell exactly how much stock is being borrowed privately. Transactions of this sort in the loan crowd are therefore likely to be deceptive, but in a general way may be regarded as giving some indication as to just how the short interest stands. The bear traders had nothing particularly new in the way of arguments to support their position, but contended that the market was due for a reaction on technical conditions alone. They received some encouragement from moderate sales reported for public account. It was noted, however, that few of them were confident enough of their position on the short side to hold it long, but were inclined to cover whenever prices showed an advancing tendency.

***

Attitude of Insiders.

"I do not want any better evidence of the position of large banking interests toward the market," remarked one broker of bullish inclinations, "than the way in which prices acted last week following the death of Mr. Rogers. There was a good excuse for a break of five or ten points in stocks if the insiders had wanted them to go down. If they were out of stocks, as some have been contending, they had a splendid chance of precipitating a break on that occasion, which would have enabled them to buy back shares at considerably lower levels. If they were not committed to the bull side, it is hardly probable that they would have supported the market in the way they did. I construe their action as meaning that they are long of stocks and are expecting still higher levels before they liquidate."

***

New Record for Steel.

United States Steel common seems to have acquired the habit of making a new high record every day or two, and yesterday was no exception. In the early trading it advanced to 60⅞, but failed to retain the gain. London has recently been a heavy buyer of Steel, and took on quite a good deal more yesterday. It is believed in some well-informed quarters that no small part of the purchases for London account are for the purpose of covering calls on the stock sold to New York interests. For several weeks certain New Yorkers credited with knowing a good deal about the steel business have been heavy buyers of options in London, and this appears to have been a very profitable occupation for them. The bulls on the stock found a fresh argument yesterday in the announcement of the sale of $9,000,000 bonds by a subsidiary concern, this being construed as meaning that more money would be available out of earnings for dividend distribution. In other words, they saw in it another indication of a probable increase in the common dividend.

***

Rise in Long Island.

Considerable interest was aroused by a further advance of a point in Long Island Railroad, on top of its 4 point rise of Saturday. Until last week the transactions in this stock had been few and far between, but it suddenly developed a great burst of strength and activity. In the minds of the traders the rise was associated chiefly with the extensive improvements by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in and about this city, the completion of which is now in sight. The contention was that the Long Island Road would greatly benefit from these undertakings. The rise in the shares recalled an interesting bit of ancient history. Some years ago a capitalist, now heavily interested in the anthracite coal roads, had the bulk of his fortune tied up in Long Island Railroad. He sold out at a figure not far from that at which Long Island is now quoted, and put the money received into Jersey Central, which was then selling at about the same price. Meanwhile Long Island has remained more or less stationary, while Jersey Central has advanced to a figure beyond the reach of most investors.

***

Renewed Activity in Erie.

Shortly before the close of business the Erie shares became active and strong, the common advancing 1⅛, while the first preferred moved up 1¾ and the second preferred gained about a point. In the last week or so, the Eries have been more or less neglected, and the sudden revival of speculative interest in them brought forth a renewal of the recent reports of a possible change in the company's financial plan, by which it might abandon the proposed $30,000,000 collateral trust bond issue authorized in connection with the funding scheme, and meet its requirements by the sale of some other class of securities. The promptness with which the Erie has been meeting its current obligations and the improvement in its earnings had already served to create a more optimistic sentiment toward its securities.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

Money in Increased Demand in London—Paris Prices Firm.

LONDON, May 24.—Money was in increased demand on the market to-day, and discounts were quiet. Austria secured the bulk of $2,500,000 in gold at a reduction of one farthing.

On the Stock Exchange the chief business was the arrangement of the heavy carry-over in mines, but transactions for new account were of fair dimensions. Mexican rails, copper shares, and Kaffirs received the most attention at rising prices. Gilt-edged securities and home rails dropped for lack of support. Japanese bonds yielded on realizations.

American securities were firm in the forenoon. Covering orders, principally for United States Steel and Union Pacific, carried values over parity. Later the low-priced issues received attention, and with Wall Street supporting it fairly the market closed firm.

STEEL TRUST SELLS BONDS.

W. A. Read & Co. Take $9,000,000 Worth of 4½ Per Cents.

The United States Steel Corporation has sold to William A. Read & Co. $9,000,000 Chicago, Lake Shore & Eastern 4½ per cent. sixty-year first mortgage bonds, which are guaranteed principal and interest by the Steel Corporation, and also by the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern. The property of the Chicago, Lake Shore & Eastern includes the terminal railroad serving the Gary plant.

This is one of several sales of bonds held by the Steel Corporation through which the Steel Corporation has recently reimbursed itself for expenditures for new property. The railroad against which these $9,000,000 of bonds have been sold represents a total outlay of about $18,000,000.

The bankers will probably offer the bonds for public subscription, but the date of the offer and the price to be named for the bonds were not announced yesterday.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee continued quiet yesterday, but ruled generally steady, the close being steady, net unchanged, to 5 points higher, while sales were reported of 8,500 bags. An advance of ¼@½ pfennig at Hamburg was offset by an unchanged market at Havre. Santos was unchanged and Rio was 50 reis higher. Receipts at the two ports were 8,000 bags, against 16,000 last year. Spot Coffee was quiet; 7⅞@8c for Rio No. 7. Total warehouse deliveries in the United States for the week were 50,539 bags, against 72,397 the week before and 103,908 last year. Of the former amount New York had 48,149 bags.

Receipts at Rio and Santos for the week totaled 44,000 bags, against 47,000 last week, 90,000 last year, and 291,000 two years ago.

THE UNDERSIGNED WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE ABOVE BONDS AT 95½% AND ACCRUED INTEREST TO DELIVERY.

The subscription will be closed at three o'clock P. M. on Wednesday, May 26, 1909, or earlier, the right being reserved to reject any applications and to award a smaller amount than applied for. The undersigned reserve the right to close the subscription at any time without notice.

A first payment of $30 in New York funds per $1,000 Bonds subscribed for must accompany all subscriptions. The balance of the amount due on bonds allotted upon subscriptions will be payable, in New York funds, on June 17, 1909, at the office of either of the undersigned, when temporary certificates will be delivered, exchangeable for engraved bonds as soon as ready.

If no allotment be made, the first payment will be repaid in full, and if only a portion of the amount applied for be allotted, the balance of the first payment will be applied towards the amount due on June 17, 1909. No interest will be allowed on such first payment. If any further balance remains, such balance will be repaid. Failure to pay the second installment, when due, will render the previous payment liable to forfeiture.

Samuel McRoberts, Esq., Treasurer of Armour & Co., in a letter dated May 20, 1909, writes in part as follows:

"Referring to the $30,000,000 face value of these bonds which we have sold to you, we beg to advise you that they are part of a proposed authorized issue limited to $50,000,000 face value of bonds, to be secured by a first mortgage upon the packing houses (in Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, East St. Louis, Sioux City and Fort Worth), glue works, soap works and other factories, the branch houses, warehouses, refrigerating plants and icing stations and the other real estate and buildings and the machinery and other appurtenances thereto, which constitute the 'plant' used in the production and distribution of the products of Armour and Company and its auxiliary companies. The aggregate present value of the real property to be mortgaged to secure said bonds, based upon recent appraisals, is upward of $40,000,000. The mortgage is to provide that there shall be no mortgages or other incumbrances upon the refrigerator cars and other rolling stock now owned by the company and by its auxiliary companies, including the Armour car lines (present value, $11,698,240), or upon any property substituted therefor or upon any rolling stock purchased from the proceeds of bonds secured by said mortgage.

"The mortgage will further provide that the unencumbered quick assets of the company and its auxiliary companies shall at all times exceed the aggregate debt of the company and its auxiliary companies, including the outstanding bonds of said issue. The mortgage is also to contain a covenant that no dividends shall be paid except from earnings made subsequent to the fiscal year ended October 24, 1908.

"It therefore results that in addition to the real property on which the bonds will be a first mortgage, and without including the rolling stock and investments in securities, there must be on hand at all times at least sufficient unencumbered quick assets to liquidate dollar for dollar the entire debt of the Company and its auxiliary companies.

"The proceeds of the bonds which you have purchased will be used in retiring the Company's commercial paper and for additional working capital. Of the $20,000,000 of bonds which are not to be presently issued, $10,000,000 may be used to provide for general improvements and betterments to property subject to the mortgage or for the acquisition of additional property to be subject to the mortgage, and of cars and other equipment and raw materials, supplies, and other assets constituting a part of the property used in the Company's business; and $10,000,000 may be used only for future permanent improvements, betterments, extensions, and additions to the mortgaged property, the acquisition of additional real estate and the construction and acquisition of additional packing houses, factories, branch houses, and other structures, all to become subject to the mortgage as a first lien.

"The earnings of Armour and Company and its auxiliary companies applicable to interest charges after charging off liberal amounts for depreciation were at the average rate of over $5,500,000 a year for the three fiscal years ending October 24, 1908 (the new plants at East St. Louis, Fort Worth and Sioux City having been in operation during that period), and for the eight years ended on that date over $4,250,000 per year. The past year was the most successful in the Company's history.

"After paying the bills payable out of the proceeds of the bonds which you have purchased, the position of this Company and its auxiliary companies, based upon conservative appraisals and upon the balance sheet of October 24, 1908 (the close of the last fiscal year), would be as follows:

Real estate, buildings and machinery	$40,030,358 64
Rolling stock	11,698,240 44
Investments in other companies	10,471,993 05
Miscellaneous marketable securities	3,664,057 07
Quick assets (consisting of packing house products, supplies, accounts receivable and cash), after deducting the $3,271,207.14 of current accounts payable	46,004,976 04
Total assets	$111,869,625 24

against which the present issue of $30,000,000 bonds would be the only debt.

"Application will be made for the listing upon the New York Stock Exchange of the $30,000,000 of bonds which you have purchased."

For further information as to this issue of Bonds, reference is made to the letter from Samuel McRoberts, Esq., Treasurer of Armour & Co., referred to above, copies of which can be obtained from either of the undersigned.

TO THE INVESTING PUBLIC:

We are now closing the financing of ELTIRO COPPER COMPANY, Silver Bell District, Arizona. This company's property has been under development for the past five years, and it is now brought to the attention of the general public for the first time.

Of the company's $1,000,000 issue of securities, $750,000 has been sold at private sale, and we now offer the balance at the same price paid by those whose money has brought the properties up to their present condition.

The securities of this company offer an exceptionally attractive investment opportunity. The financing is practically completed, the properties contain large reserves of ore that can be treated by the simplest and cheapest methods known, the greater part of the equipment for extensive operations is installed, and the company will be actively producing copper within 60 days.

Every step in the development and equipment of these properties has been taken with extreme care. The management has had all the advantages that expert knowledge and sufficient capital could furnish, and the complete success of the company's plans is now assured.

We believe an investment in the securities of this enterprise combines, to an unusual degree, the qualities of safety and substantial profit, and that no copper flotation of recent years had been so likely to commend itself to discerning investors.

Descriptive circulars will be furnished on application.

Unless the Court shall otherwise direct, for just cause shown upon the petition of any person desiring to bid at such sale, no bids will be received from any bidder who shall not first deposit with the undersigned Special Master the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, ($100,000,) either in cash or in a check certified by a National or State bank or trust company, situate in the City of New York, or in lieu thereof receivers' certificates mentioned in Paragraph II. of said decree, in the principal amount of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) or bonds or coupons mentioned in Paragraph I. of said decree, to the amount in face value of not less than one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.) Said property is to be sold subject to all taxes, assessments, and liens prior to the lien of the mortgage mentioned in Paragraph I. of said decree, and existing in favor of any person or persons, corporation or corporations, not a party to the above-entitled cause, except such as are specifically directed by said decree to be paid out of the proceeds of sale. In the event of the insufficiency of the proceeds of sale to pay in full the amounts directed by said decree to be paid out of such proceeds, prior to the principal and interest secured by the aforesaid mortgage, the Court reserves the right from time to time to require the payment of the deficiency by the purchaser, in the manner and to the extent provided in said decree. It is one of the conditions of sale that the purchaser shall as a part of the consideration and in addition to the price bid assume all pending contracts in respect to the property of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, whether leasehold or otherwise, made prior to the sale by the Receivers of the New York City Railway Company or the Receivers of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and that the purchaser or purchasers, its, his, or their successors or assigns, shall perform all such contracts and shall pay, satisfy, and discharge any unpaid indebtedness and obligations or liabilities, whether in contract or in tort, which shall have been duly contracted or incurred by the Receivers of the New York City Railway Company or the Receivers of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company in respect to the property of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, whether leasehold or otherwise, before the delivery of possession of the property sold, and which shall not have been paid by the said Receivers or shall not be paid out of the proceeds of sale, and shall indemnify and save harmless the said Receivers and each of them from any liability resulting therefrom. For further information as to the contracts, indebtedness, obligations, and liabilities to be assumed by the purchaser reference is hereby made to the detailed statements to be filed pursuant to the said decree, with the undersigned, and with the clerk of said court, which statements will be open to inspection prior to the sale by any person desiring to bid at the sale, the said statements being advisory only, and in no wise constituting a warranty. In addition to the cash, checks, bonds, coupons, or Receivers' certificates deposited at the time of sale by the purchaser at said sale, there is also to be paid in cash by the purchaser upon the confirmation of such sale, and from time to time thereafter, such further portions of the purchase price of said property as the Court may deem proper. Any purchaser of said property may satisfy and make good the balance of his bid above the sum required to be paid in cash by delivering to the undersigned, Special Master, bonds duly certified under the mortgage mentioned in Paragraph I. of said decree, or coupons thereto appertaining, or Receivers' certificates mentioned in Paragraph II. of said decree, which securities, unless in negotiable form, payable to bearer, shall be duly indorsed or assigned in blank. Such bonds, coupons, or Receivers' certificates, whether delivered to the Special Master at the time of sale or subsequently, will be received at such price or value as shall be equivalent to the sum which would be payable out of the net proceeds of such sale, if made for money, to the holder or holders of said bonds, coupons, or Receivers' certificates, for his or their just share or proportion in that character of such net proceeds upon a due accounting and apportionment and distribution of such net proceeds. For a further statement of the terms and conditions of sale, and for a more particular description of the property to be sold, reference is hereby made to the said decree, and to the inventory prepared by the undersigned Special Master, in pursuance of said decree and filed with the Clerk of this Court on April 27, 1909, which inventory is advisory only and in no wise constitutes a warranty. The said inventory will be open to inspection at any time prior to the sale by any person desiring to bid at the sale. BEET SUGAR COMPROMISE.

Although it has been said on behalf of the present management of the American Beet Sugar Company that they would appear at to-day's meeting with proxies representing 70 per cent. of the common and preferred stock, the minority shareholders have been permitted, it was learned yesterday, to have a voice in choosing four new Directors. Some weeks ago A. A. Housman & Co. and Harriman & Co. sent out proxy forms with the idea of claiming at to-day's meeting a larger representation of the common shares in the board.

The men scheduled for election at to-day's meeting are all representatives of firms which are largely interested in the stock with the exception of Middleton S. Burrill, who is an old stockholder. In addition to Mr. Burrill they are J. Horace Harding of C. D. Barney & Co., Franklin Q. Brown of Redmond & Co., and Gerald L. Hoyt of Maitland, Coppell & Co. The last named is at present in Europe, and his election will take place at some future meeting. His firm is the New York agent of the Dutch banking house of Habrecht, Vassvisser & Van Harencarstel, who were instrumental in having American Beet Sugar securities listed on the Amsterdam Bourse.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Women's Fur Coats with Embroidered Collars Are Dutiable at 60 Per Cent.

Judge Platt in the United States Circuit Court decided yesterday that silk embroidered collars on women's fur coats render the articles dutiable at the rate of 60 per cent. under the provision in the Dingley tariff for "embroideries" on the plea that the embroidery enhances the value of the coats.

Judge Platt says in his decision that he affirms "reluctantly" the decision of the Board of Appraisers, but does so in order to make certain other decisions of the courts "harmonious." Hugo Jaeckel & Sons, the importers of the coats, set up the contention that the coats are "manufactures of fur," and as such, should be deemed dutiable at the rate of 35 per cent. The Collector took the position that the embroidered collar added materially to the value of the coats, and that, consequently, the completed articles should pay as "embroideries."

Judge Platt shows in his decision that he does not believe that a valuable fur garment is taken out of its natural classification as a manufacture of fur, because a trivial adornment of embroidered silk has been attached to the article. At the same time the court points out that a somewhat similar issue came before Judge Hazel recently. Judge Platt says that in the interests of harmony he affirms the decision of the board.

"It seems better for all parties interested," says the decision, "that the decisions of the courts should be harmonious. The Lichtenstein decision seems to have been accepted by the importers for about two years, and it would be unfortunate to create confusion by a different interpretation of the proviso now. For these reasons the decision of the Board of Appraisers is reluctantly affirmed."

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Daily Consular and Trade Report for to-morrow notes the following trade opportunities:

COAL AND COKE—Deputy Consul General Archibald Dorman of Berlin, Germany, reports that a supply of coke and small coal is required for the Government railway at Pilsen, Austria, for the year 1910. Bids will be received until June 15, 1909.

INTERIOR DECORATIONS — An American Consul in South Africa reports a market in his district with an increasing demand for original designs of moldings for interior decorations. While the territory is a limited one and the demand will be small at first, yet the Consul is of the opinion that the trade is well worth considering, and American firms should obtain a reasonable share of it. One firm with which the Consul conversed informed him that it would be glad to make an American connection for this line of goods.

TELEPHONE INSTALLATION AND SUPPLIES—A report has been received from an American Consul in Mexico in which he states that a business man in his district has been granted by the City Council a franchise to put in a local telephone exchange. After approval by the Governor of the State, the work on the installation of the exchange will begin, and application will also be made to the Federal Government for permission to make telephone connection with a certain city in the United States across the border line.

IRON AND BRASS BEDS.—A reputable commission merchant doing business in a large city of the West Indies advises an American Consular officer located in that region that he is desirous of obtaining agencies of firms in the United States that are in a position to export iron and brass beds, furniture, hardware, and a cheap grade of chairs and rockers.

RAILROAD TIES.—An American Consular officer in a European country reports that there is a most active demand for railroad ties of durable quality. The Government railroad officials have decided to double-track the principal lines of the Government system. Consequently inquiries are being made for available markets to furnish ties acceptable to the Government authorities. The interested parties are anxious to hear at once from responsible persons who wish to do business, and correspondence with the firm named in the report may be conducted in English.

KNITTING MACHINES AND WOOL YARN—An American Consul in India reports that a merchant in the city in which he is located wishes to procure prices and samples of two-ply wool yarn suitable for socks, underwear, &c. The material should be such as is used in the United States for light-weight Summer goods. This merchant has been procuring wool yarn from England at prices ranging from 48 to 55 cents per pound, according to samples forwarded with the report and which can be obtained by interested firms from the Bureau of Manufactures. Samples should accompany the quotation on this article. The same person would also like to correspond with manufacturers of knitting machines with a view to purchasing for his own use and also to act as agent in that region for a reliable machine. An English-made knitting machine sells there for $129.75, freight and duty paid by seller.

AUTOMOBILE AND MOTOR BOATS—A report has been received from an American Consul in Mexico in which it is stated that a business man from the United States has rented a building in his district and will probably open an American hotel in the near future. This person, who is also in the real estate business in that region, contemplates the purchase of another high-grade automobile (a large steam or electric touring car) and also one or two motor boats, to be used in taking prospective buyers to and from points of the country.

SEIZE FACTORY HANDS REMOVE ITS TRACKS

Susquehanna Laborers Imprison Workers in Babbitt Plant While Spur Is Torn Up.

HELD THEM FOUR HOURS

Watchman, Engineers, and Firemen Locked in a Car—Explosion in Factory Narrowly Averted.

The town of Babbitt, between Weehawken and Paterson, N. J., which consists solely of the manufacturing plant of the B. T. Babbitt Soap Company, has been cut off from communication with the outer world, at least so far as railroad accommodations go. The railway tracks were removed on Sunday morning, and by 11:30 o'clock Babbitt had ceased to be a way station on a spur of the New York, Susquehanna & Western Railroad, a tributary line of the Erie.

At 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning the watchman at the Babbitt works was surprised to see a train of several flat cars and one closed freight car pull off the main tracks of the Susquehanna line and run on to the Babbitt spur, which was built several years ago, the company and the railroad sharing the expense, according to ex-Judge William H. Wadhams, general counsel for the soap company.

Nearly one hundred men were on the cars and when the train came to a stop several of them approached the watchman and told him that they were police officials, and that a man had been murdered in Hackensack, who was believed to have been a Babbitt workman. They said that the watchman must accompany them to Hackensack, and overruling his objections they are alleged to have carried him to the freight car, pushed him inside, and then locked the door.

The watchman called for help but his voice could not carry far from inside the freight car. Nevertheless the chief engineer of the works heard the noise of the train as it ran up the siding, and he came out to investigate. He was seized, and the same story was told to him that had been told to the watchman. Then he was carried to the freight car and locked inside. With the watchman and chief engineer out of the way, several of the men entered the works.

As it was Sunday, only a clerk and eight assistant engineers and firemen were inside. Two of the assistant engineers were in a separate room and these were seized next. Like the others they were taken to the freight car and lockd inside where the watchman and the engineer were storming at their captivity.

Then, one by one, the other six men were brought to the freight car and locked inside. When the last man was safely under lock the newcomers posted pickets all around the works and then fell to work with picks, shovels, and tracks irons. For four and a half hours they worked steadily, and then the freight car door was opened and the imprisoned men were invited to come outside. They stepped to the ground to find themselves on the main track of the railroad. The Babbitt spur to which the cars had been run when they first arrived had ceased to exist. Ties and rails with the rail nails were piled upon the freight cars, and on top of them sat the workmen, broad grins upon their faces, to watch the astonished prisoners step from captivity.

Once the watchman and the chief engineer with their companions were out of the car the train started up and steamed away. No word of explanation was offered by the men. One man alone had not been locked up, and when his companions entered the works they found him trying desperately to do the work of eight men and keep the fires going properly. He told his chief that he had been kept under guard while the work of tearing up the tracks was going on, and had been threatened if he dared to blow a steam whistle. He said that several times in the four hours it had been necessary for some of the strangers to help him with the fires and boilers to prevent an explosion.

As soon as the men were liberated they communicated with Mr. Wadhams, the counsel for the soap company, and he hurried to Babbitt to make an investigation. He was able to learn but little, however, as the workmen had no way of knowing who their assailants had been. Mr. Wadhams said at his home, 39 East Eleventh Street, last night that the action was the most high-handed piece of work that had ever been accomplished in the East.

Mr. Wadhams said that an investigation would be carried on until the whole truth came out, and he added: "We expect to laugh last."

The Babbitt spur was built to accommodate the shipments made by the company. Recently much of this business has been done by wagon and automobile instead of by train, as was the case in the past. The failure of the company to keep up the former size of their freight shipments was displeasing to the railroad, according to gossip which reached the company, but the concern was never notified officially of such an attitude on the railroad's part, the counsel said.

No statement could be obtained last night from the railroad officials.

MISS LEWIS'S WILL FILED.

Brooklyn Spinster Freed from Asylum Left $200,000.

The will of Miss Mary Elizabeth Lewis, an aged Brooklyn spinster, who obtained her freedom from the Bloomingdale Asylum in 1907 by proving that she was capable of managing her large estate, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. She died on Sunday in the Seney Hospital, Seventh Avenue and Sixth Street, where she had been a patient for several months. Her will, executed at that institution on May 7, names the Kings County Trust Company as executor of her estate, which amounts to over $200,000.

Mrs. Rosetta E. Hodgman, Thomas and John A. Lewis, the sister and brothers of Miss Lewis, are the principal beneficiaries of the will. Besides the sum of $500 which each receives, two sums of $50,000 are put in trust with the executor of the estate for Mrs. Hodgman and Thomas Lewis, each to receive the income on the money. John A. Lewis receives the income on $75,000.

GIRL MISSING TWO WEEKS.

Police Search the East Side in Vain for Elsie Rosenfeld.

No news has been received by the parents of Elsie Rosenfeld, an attractive-looking girl of 20 years, since she disappeared from her home, 287 Seventh Street, on Sunday, May 9, to go with a girl friend to obtain some work from a nearby dressmaker. The father, Jacob Rosenfeld, who works at a furrier's in East Eleventh Street, went to Police Headquarters, and a general alarm was sent out for the girl on Monday, May 10. Detectives have since sought for the missing girl in vain.

Mrs. Rosenfeld cannot account for her daughter's disappearance.

"She was my firstborn and a good girl," she said yesterday. "For some weeks she had been out of work, and she was not content. On that Sunday morning she came to me and said she had good news for me. Then she told me she was going with a friend who knew the forewoman of a large dressmaking place in Grand Street to get work.

"Elsie dressed and went away, taking a new, unfinished waist, which she said she could finish on the machine at the new place. When night came and she did not come home we became alarmed for her safety. That night we could find no trace of her."

When asked if it was likely that Elsie had eloped, the mother replied that, so far as she knew, there was no young man in the case, because the girl always spent her evenings at home with her four young brothers and sisters. Mrs. Rosenfeld was sure that if her daughter was free and able to write she would let her parents know and not keep them in such agony of suspense.

The girl is described as having dark brown hair, dark complexion, and blue eyes, good teeth, and has a scar about half an inch long under the right eyebrow. She is of Hungarian descent and speaks English with a broken accent.

The police say that everything possible has been done to trace the girl, but that it is difficult to get any information in such densely populated districts, where three or four families live in one flat, the majority of them not speaking English. They discredit the mothers belief that the girl is being held a prisoner in some house.

WROTE HIS OWN OBITUARY.

Cyrus Clark, Who Died Yesterday, Left One Blank in It.

Cyrus Clark, for many years President of the West End Association, and prominent in the development of the west side, died yesterday in his home, 327 West Seventy-sixth Street, of paralysis, in his seventy-ninth year. He was stricken on May 15. There was a recurrence of the attack on Wednesday.

Mr. Clark was known as a very methodical man, a phase of his character which was emphasized by his preparation of his own obituary notice, with the date of his death left blank. This blank his son filled yesterday. The notice which Mr. Clark had written says:

"Cyrus Clark was born Sept. 18, 1830, in the town of Sardinia, Erie County, N. Y., and his parents moved to Buffalo soon afterward, in which city he received his early education. In 1849 Mr. Clark came to New York and entered the employ of Clark, Southworth & Co., silk merchants, where he stayed five years, and then started for himself under the name of Vincent Clark & Co. At the end of ten years he retired from the silk business, having invested his money in real estate to good advantage.

"After spending three years in Europe studying civic conditions Mr. Clark returned to this city in 1870 and took up his residence on the west side. He caused the first bill to be introduced into the Legislature to exempt mortgages from taxation, and was President of the West End Association for fifteen years. He was a member of the Union League Club for forty-six years, and was Vice President of the club for one term. He is survived by two sons and three daughters."

ELKINS YACHT IN COLLISION.

The Venetia Loses Bowsprit in Crash with Schooner in the Bay.

A collision between Senator Stephen B. Elkins's steam yacht Venetia and the three-masted schooner Harry S. Shepard, near the South Brooklyn side of the upper bay, damaged both vessels yesterday. The Venetia's bow struck the starboard side of the schooner and tore away several feet of the railing. Her engines refused to work after the accident, and she drifted about helplessly for a short time until a Merritt-Chapman Wrecking Company's tug responded to the yacht's whistle for help, and towed both vessels to a dry dock in the Erie Basin. The Venetia's bowsprit was smashed and the forward port side was splintered in the collision. She was on her way to the dry dock to be overhauled before going into commission for the Summer when the accident occurred.

A strong tide was flowing, and the skippers of both vessels did not reckon on the strength of the current until the collision seemed inevitable. The Venetia was going northwest and the schooner was going due east, headed for the Beard docks in South Brooklyn.

CAR ROWDY PUT UNDER BOND.

He Jumped Through a Window and Fell in a Woman's Lap.

Magistrate Dooley held court in the Gates Avenue building yesterday, and Ernest Kruder, 18 years old, of 37 Maujer Street, was brought before him, charged with disorderly conduct for attempting to board a train through the car window at the Nostrand Avenue station of the Myrtle Avenue elevated line on Sunday night.

William T. O'Connor, a special policeman for the B. R. T., told the Magistrate that Kruder landed squarely in a woman passenger's lap afer jumping through the car window. The woman refused to give her name or make a complaint.

"I'll put a stop to this particularly obnoxious type of rowdyism right at the start," the Magistrate said, addressing Kruder. "I'll put you under a bond of $500 to keep the peace for six months, in default of which you will spend that time on Blackwell's Island."

HITS POLICE AND PURITANS

People Clubbed if They Try to Speak Freely, She Says—Talk Symposium at the Sunrise Club.

Emma Goldman, whose lecture on the drama the police stopped on Sunday morning, talked back to the police last night at a Sunrise Club meeting in the Café Boulevard. She also made remarks about Puritanism, fired a broadside at Anthony Comstock, and called George Bernard Shaw a jingo. The Sunrise Club opposed her about 16 to 1. The police, who were there in force, but in plain clothes, didn't seem to mind. They made no attempt to check the flow of oratory.

Nothing was said about anarchy. Had there been, there might have been a different ending, but Miss Goldman had been notified that Inspector Herlihy and twelve of his men were ready to break up the dinner party if the speakers grew violent in attacking law and order.

Miss Goldman had been invited to talk to the Sunrise Club on "The Hypocrisy of Puritanism." She talked for half an hour, and into that crowded many thoughts which in condensed form amounted to a general condemnation of Puritanism and censure for all who hold Puritanical views. The dining room was filled to its utmost capacity to hear her, and as many women were there as men.

After first paying her respects to Mr. Shaw, Miss Goldman passed on to the Mayflower Society. "The other day, when I happened to be present at a meeting of the Mayflower descendants, I had a chance to see the result of Puritanism in this country," said Miss Goldman. "Some of those Mayflower descendants are still using smelling salts, I hear. I looked at them and realized what Puritanism had done for this country. And as for Bernard Shaw, he lives in a glass house, and shouldn't throw stones at America. England is really responsible for the Puritanism here, seeing that Puritanism originated in England."

Miss Goldman said that she could think of nothing harsh enough to say against Puritanism. While it no longer has power to torture those with whom it is displeased, it is, nevertheless, a great power in this country.

"Else how can an old bigot like Anthony Comstock live in a city like New York?" she continued.

Puritanism, she said, was afraid of life and that which is true and natural in life. "Has it driven out the evil spirit?" she continued. "No; it has driven it deeper into the flesh and has made people do on the sly what they are afraid to do in the open. It has created the false modesty which made Pittsburg hold up its hands in horror at a picture recently exhibited there." Passing on to talk of freedom of speech, she said:

"It is being outraged every day. If you don't believe it go and attend some of the meetings we are trying to hold and you will be clubbed out the same as some people were clubbed out yesterday. Most of the police cannot read, so how can they interpret what should be uttered and what should not be?"

She wound up by saying that the country should not be ruled by the police or such men as Anthony Comstock, or by such women as members of the Mayflower Society. "Certainly not by those Mayflower ladies who are dull in their heads and dull in their hearts," she concluded.

C. E. Walker, President of the Sunrise Club, announced that the other speakers would be limited to seven minutes each. He called on Henry Nicolls, who said that in some things he agreed with Miss Goldman. He added that J. P. Morgan was a typical Puritan. Then he took a fling at the police and said they were "ridiculous."

F. L. Johnson, associate editor of Power, followed Mr. Nicolls. He said that Miss Goldman was wrong in at least one thing—the origin of Puritanism. He said that it began in Eden, when Eve handed Adam the apple and they grew ashamed of having no clothes. Then Col. William W. Wingate of Brooklyn, a newly-initiated member of the club, got up. He said he didn't sympathize with Miss Goldman at all. He was a Puritan, he said, and he, for one, believed that preaching against organized government and against law and order and other things should not be allowed. He referred to Miss Goldman as a foreigner "who comes here and begins to attack the laws."

"Our laws were made by a judiciary body, and some of them were interpreted by one of the greatest Presidents who ever lived—he who is now on a hunting trip to Africa—and such laws should be observed and obeyed and should not be allowed to be attacked," he declared.

President Walker said after that that he was sorry the audience did not appreciate satire. Then another "Puritan" got up. He was Joseph M. Norton, Jr., who said that he was the grandson of a Puritan. A suffragist spoke next. She was announced as "Mrs. Julia Gatere," and said that she had only one "kick" and that was against masculine government. She said she didn't want the marriage laws changed at all, except, perhaps, to make divorce a little easier.

Arthur H. Grant, who followed her as a speaker, was inclined to think that they had all been tilting at windmills.

Several other members of the club took a fling at Miss Goldman and the police and at one thing or another. John Francis Tucker, the Rev. L. C. Barnes, and Harry Tucker were among them. J. R. Abarbanelle said that had the blue laws been enforced at Coney on Sunday it would have been a return to Puritanism. As things stand, he said, Puritanism is a symbol of graft and hypocrisy. Adolph Benevy, Dr. M. R. Leverson, and others spoke. Dr. Leverson said the police ought to be abolished, "especially Commissioner Bingham," he added.

BOYS' FLYING SEANCE.

Pupils of School 77 Want Aeroplanes, but Must Use Kites.

If any one finds a dozen or more kites drifting about the fields between Astoria and Flushing, the boys of Public School 77, at First Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street, would like to hear about it. They would like to know how far their runaway kites did go yesterday afternoon before coming to earth.

A small army of boys from this school with kites of curious shapes and still more curious construction crossed to Astoria by the Ninety-second Street Ferry yesterday afternoon and had a kite contest on the public school athletic field, just north of the Astoria ferry house.

"Ever since the arrival of the Wright brothers in the city the boys have been literally crazy on the subject of aeronautics," said Principal Edward A. Page yesterday. "Nothing will suit them now but to build a school aeroplane. We have four or five lads who believe they have solved within the last three weeks some of the most difficult problems of aerial navigation. Kite flying seems to be about the first step in the science, so we decided to begin at the foundation and let the boys show what they could do."

Within fifteen minutes after the junior sky pilots reached the ground forty or more kites were in the air, some mounting so high toward the heavens that their bright-colored material seemed mere dots of color against the blue sky. Others took a more slanting direction, running far out over the roof of a big iron foundry.

As an incentive to juvenile ambitions, prizes were offered. Walter Mohr and Abraham E. Horn, teachers of manual training in the school, were the officials, and they were kept busy running from one point of the field to another to verify the superiority or some particular kite. The big 14-foot kite made by Abraham Moscom won the award for being the largest, but it was outstripped in high flying by many others. Alfred Vollmer, a 14-year-old boy, won the prize for the highest flight. His kite, a big green-covered creation, went up in the air for one mile, at least, so the judges said, and no one disputed them.

The kite that pulled the strongest met with disaster. It was made by John Berkowitz, and when the scales were attached to the stout cord it showed a pull of twenty-eight pounds. The northwesterly wind which came in lively gusts made it a difficult matter to hold the kite, as it was eight and a half feet long and covered with white cloth. Berkowitz's fingers were cut in the effort to hold it, and once it dragged three boys half way across the field. But finally a gust of wind caused the huge kite to dip far beyond the roof of the iron foundry, and the cord broke. Half a dozen boys were over the fence in a minute. They ran nearly a mile, only to hear that it had been seen sailing off a mile further on, and they returned in disappointment.

Milton Herkowitz won the award for the most grotesque kite. His kite resembled a scarecrow. The body of the man was of black cloth with outstretched arms supported with wooden braces, and an enormous white head. This manikin refused to fly very high. He will undergo some modifications before being sent up again.

John Toledo had one of the most spectacular kites. It was red, white, and blue, with a big star in each of the triangles. It added to the glory of the air in which white, green, black, red, and yellow kites were soaring. Alexander Lozar had a strange balloon-shaped kite, but it wouldn't go up.

The contest was the first kite-flying exhibition ever held by any public school in New York. Most of the boys are going to take their kites to Arlington, N. J., during the week for the kite prize contests there, under the direction of Samuel F. Perkins, the kite man of the Aero Club of America.

MRS. DANIEL J. SULLY'S BILL.

Wife of ex-"Cotton King" Brought to Court on a $400 Account.

A motion to have Mrs. Daniel J. Sully, wife of the former "cotton king," declared in contempt of court for refusing to be examined before trial in a suit brought against her by Theodore B. Starr & Co., jewelers, at 206 Fifth Avenue, was made by counsel for the firm before Supreme Court Justice Guy yesterday. Decision was reserved.

The action arises from a $400 bill for stationery which, it is alleged, Mrs. Sully owes the firm, which, with interest, now amounts to about $600. Mr. Sully, it is acknowledged, had a running account with the firm, but it is asserted that his wife gave her personal order for the stationery. Last Fall, while being examined, her counsel stated an arrangement was made by which Mr. Sully agreed to pay the bill, but shortly after his connection with the firm of Hayden, Stone & Co. ended, and nothing has been done in the matter of the stationery bill since that time.

Mrs. Sully's counsel held that his client should not be considered in contempt, as a disposition has been shown to arrange the matter, and that he would produce his client at any time. When asked by the court if arrangements would be made for her appearance to-day, counsel argued that it was a short notice, inasmuch as she was now living in the country. It was indicated that she would appear at the earliest possible moment, and under these conditions decision was reserved.

READY TO BUILD A SUBWAY.

Bradley-Gaffney Syndicate to File Broadway-Lexington Av. Plans Soon.

The Bradley-Gaffney-Steers combination of subway builders has decided that the new law relating to the construction of subways by private capital, if signed by Gov. Hughes, will meet its ideas on the subject of building the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line. The plans for the new subway will be filed with the Public Service Commission in the near future, and will call for the expenditure of about $50,000,000.

In so far as the plans of the Public Service Commission for the Broadway-Lexington Avenue line call for the construction of elevated lines in the Bronx, the Bradley-Gaffney-Steers people will not follow them, as their idea is to build a subway for the entire length of their route. There is now pending before the Board of Estimate an application of the same interests for a franchise to run surface cars over the new Manhattan Bridge and through Brooklyn to Flatbush and Atlantic Avenues. If it is granted the company will apply to the Public Service Commission for permission to construct this line.

FIGHT OVER SULZER'S PARK.

Creditors Sue on a Mortgage and Ask for a Receiver.

Sulzer's Harlem River Park, the scene in days past of many gay gatherings, may be nothing more than a memory in a short time. Suit was brought in the Supreme Court yesterday by the Hudson Trust Company, as trustee for the bondholders of the Harlem River Park Amusement company, which wants a hundred-thousand-dollar mortgage on the company's property foreclosed. The action is directed against the Harlem River Park Amusement Company, Sulzer's Harlem River Park Company, and others who own the park.

If the suit is successful, the prospects are that the old park, at Second Avenue and 126th Street, will be sold. It has not paid for some years. Some of the creditors of the park have engaged Arnold Lichtig to sue for money due, among them being Simon Strauss, $1,867; George W. Markey, for advertising, $10, and Francis P. McQuade, advertising, $5.

Recently some of the creditors contributed 10 per cent. of their claims to keep the business going, and received bonds of the Harlem River Park Company, which was incorporated early this year, with a capital stock of $100,000. For some years before that the park was run by the Harlem River Park Amusement Company, but it made an assignment for creditors last September. The park was started many years ago by the late Herman Sulzer, and in his lifetime was a profitable venture. The park's liabilities are now placed at $300,000. The creditors ask the appointment of a receiver.

THE W&H SHOPS

To Men Who Know

"WHY DON'T YOU ADVERTISE?" That question has been put to us daily for at least 10 years.

Our customers would say: You have the shops, you have the service, and you have the merchandise. The public ought to know it.

That was just the answer.

These things cost money, and our values leave only a small margin of profit.

We couldn't take it out of the customer and we had to live.

We were advertising in our business. Giving the public so much for their money that they couldn't fail to find us out.

It was good business but it wasn't advertising. That was the flaw in our logic.

To make a long story short, we are going to advertise. We are going to help the public to "find us out." We are going to widen the circle of Men Who Know, even if we have to invest our remaining profits in the enterprise—for a while.

That will all come back in increased business.

We have faith in our story and the things we stand for. We believe that story will interest Men Who Know but do not Know us.
